Mount Joy Farmers' Cooperative Reports Growth

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

MT. JOY (Lancaster Co.) — The Mt. Joy Farmers' Cooperative increased its members and total pounds of milk shipped in 1995, but the price of milk was down. This report was given at the annual cooperative meeting Wednesday at noon.

Marlin Benedict gave the financial report. He said the 221,757,601 pounds of milk handled by the cooperative represented a 31.9 percent increase. This milk was valued at over six million dollars in spite of a 25 percent decrease. The average milk price to members declined 74 cents from $14.21 in 1994 to 13.47 this year. The actual net price to members was $12.60.

With the declining milk price, the cooperative continues to try to pass along to members as much of the received price as possible. Thus the year-end "13th check," and the

Two queens and a princess. From left, Jona Hoover reigns as the national honey queen, Emilie Miller is the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford princess, and Emily Anderson was crowned Pennsylvania honey queen last month. In addition, the contestants for the New York Dairy Princess Pageant are ready for their big event later this month and some of their present dairy princesses have been named "big princesses." Staff Writer Lou Ann Good has stories on this royalty, the J. Leslie Landis family, and more in Section B.

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The shape of the next Farm Bill is far from known, and proof is the switch in speakers to discuss the Farm Bill at the Tuesday morning general session of the 1996 Pennsylvania Crops Conference held at the Embers Inn, in Carlisle.

Michael L. Wagner, executive director of the Ohio Corn Growers Association was the speaker, though he replaced Susan Keith of the National Corn Growers Association, who had replaced Keith Heard, vice president of the NCGA.

The reason for the speaker-switching was because the U.S. Legislature restarted discussions on the Farm Bill and the higher-level representatives of the NCGA needed to be in Washington D.C. to help argue on behalf of corn growers.

Wagner started his talk with an example of how lobbying efforts

Five-Acre Awards Presented At Conference

Corn Growers Could Face Vote On Checkoff

At the crops conference, the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club awards were presented. First place awards went to, from left, Jack Coleman, Ronks, in the shelled grain class three-acre-plus harvest size; John Crist, Jersey Shore, for the shelled grain class machine harvest size; Richard Kreider, Lebanon, for the shelled grain, three-year average, three-acre-plus harvest size; Herman Manbeck, shelled grain class, three-year average, regular harvest size; and Ed Snook, shelled grain class, regular harvest size.

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania corn growers could be asked to vote in a referendum in the near future on a possible checkoff.

The checkoff, mirrored after a similar one in New York, could collect 1½ cents for each bushel of corn at point of purchase, according to Curt Rakestraw, president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA), on Tuesday afternoon at the Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Crops Conference.

According to Rakestraw, the price could even be reflected in corn purchased by feeders from mills.

Increasingly, there will be less and less support by the U.S. government on corn product promotion, research, and development. This could have a far-reaching and significant impact on growers

National Egg Market

JANUARY 31, 1996

Prices were unchanged to lower in the Northeast and Midwest, and unchanged elsewhere. The market tone was cautiously steady to weak. Demand was light to moderate, occasionally better where featured. Supplies were at least adequate and available with inter-dealer inquiry still light, but somewhat improved to supply an upcoming export order. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to fully adequate for the limited demand, and the trade sentiment remained barely steady to weak for the lower prices. Light hen offerings were more than adequate for the slow demand.

E. PA & NJ Poultry

JANUARY 29, 1996

Final majority prices were about unchanged compared to last Monday. The market tone was still generally steady with slight caution noted. Overall, supplies were adequate to fully adequate for the mostly moderate demand. Plants projected full schedules for this week's slaughter.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
JANUARY 31, 1996

Wheat bids turned mostly lower due to profit taking on the board and forecasts for snow in winter wheat growing areas. However, indications that China as well as other countries may seek US wheat, offered light support. Corn bids were slightly higher from recent good export sales and fund buying. Spillover strength from corn pits and a jump in soyoil demand, strengthened bean bids. Transportation problems from cold temperatures in the Midwest also pushed bids higher. Wheat 7 to 11 cents lower except Portland 1 to 2 cents higher. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 6 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 6 cents higher. Very cold temperatures continued to blast the Great Plains States, keeping traders concerned. However, some profit taking after Tuesday's higher close, weighed on wheat bids. Corn bids were slightly higher as crops remain in strong hands. Good export demand for corn this week, added strength. Ideal growing weather in South Africa and Australia, limited gains in corn and bean bids. Soybean meal demand was weak again today but strenght in corn and soyoil, underpinned bids. Severe cold weather in Midwest areas has made transportation difficult, both rail and barge. Export demand: Purchaser Commodity Tonnage Del date Nothing new to report. We Can't Keep It Quiet Any Longer

Introducing:
The
Big Dutchman.

UniGROW360 BROILER FEEDING SYSTEM.

After years of Broiler Pan Evolution, It's Time for a Revolution.

Everyone also knows manually adjusting hundreds of pans every couple of days is unrealistic. The income you would gain in feed efficiency would be lost several times over in labor costs. That's why the UniGROW360 system is so revolutionary.

NOW, YOU CAN QUICKLY AND EASILY ADJUST THE FEED LEVEL AS OFTEN AS YOU LIKE

This special winch enables simultaneous feed level adjustment of a line of UniGROW360 pans with a simple turn of the crank. Unlike other systems, it is not dependent upon level floors.

Big Dutchman.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FEBRUARY 5-11, 1996

ST. AGATHA, FEB. 5.

IT'S A HOME RUN!

Hank Aaron was born on February 5, 1934, and went on to hit over 714 home runs . . . surpassing Babe Ruth's record from 1915 to 1935. Aaron's 714th home run was hit on April 4, 1974, in the Cincinnati Riverfront Stadium. Jack Billingham of Cincinnati was pitching and a policeman, Clarence Williams, retrieved the ball. Four days later, Aaron hit his 715th home run off Dodger pitcher Al Downing at Atlanta Stadium. The Braves' relief pitcher, Tom House, retrieved the ball in the Atlanta bullpen. Aaron's first major-league home run was scored on April 23,1954, at St. Louis.

"I'm no different from anybody else with two arms, two legs, and 4,200 hits." – Pete Rose

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞To swallow a bitter pill, place it at the front of your tongue, where taste buds detect only sweetness.

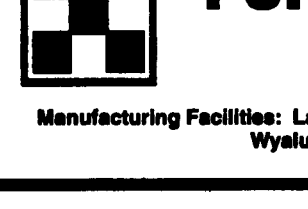
CINNAMON SYRUP

1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup dark corn syrup
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup evaporated skim milk



In a saucepan, stir together first four ingredients. Bring mixture to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil for 2 minutes; remove from heat, then stir in evaporated milk. Let cool and transfer to a pitcher. Syrup can be served with French toast, waffles, hot cereal, or pancakes — virtually anywhere you'd use maple syrup. Store, covered, in the refrigerator for up to a week.

WEATHER PROVERBS

When the wind veers opposite the Sun, trust it not, for back it'll come.

Cold weather and knaves come out of the north.

Expect rain when deer and elk come down from the mountain.

Special Offer: Handy chart full of interesting weather proverbs. Send $3 to Weather Chart, Dept UF, The Old Farmer's Almanac, Box 520, Dublin, NH 03444.

OPINION

Winter-Machine Addicts

The problems for farmers caused by weather-induced circumstances have been reported extensively during the blizzard of '96. Many dairymen had to dump milk because rural roads and farm lanes were filled with drifting snow. Milk and feed trucks could not make their rounds either.

Floods also washed out fields and fences. Frozen water pipes, power outages, and stranded cars, trucks, and cattle all added to the increased workload of winter around the farm.

One nuisance of winter on the farm that often does not receive attention is the intrusion of snowmobiles on private farmlands. Intoxicated with speed and the seemingly boundless open space created by the deep cover of snow causes many otherwise law-abiding good neighbors to lose their decency.

Zooming around farm buildings, through front yards, over tender alfalfa plants and summer tree seedlings, these stupefied winter-machine addicts frighten livestock, endanger the farm family and destroy crops with their frantic sharp-turn snow donuts and field crisscrosses.

Not only are farmers faced with property and production loss or bodily harm to the farm family, the liability factor is always present. Suppose the snowmobile invader hits a concealed tree stump or drives his machine into the farm pond or manure pit and is hospitalized, or worse?

We think those who want to run snowmobiles should treat their farm hosts as they would want to be treated at home or at their place of employment. They should ask permission. And they should be careful to not damage property or cause any reduction in income from crops or livestock since this is the farmer's home and this is how the farmer makes a living.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Monitor Stored Grain

Weather conditions this year may cause an increase in the amount of mold that corn growers will find in stored corn, according to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

Some of these molds, especially aflatoxin, may cause problems when fed to livestock and poultry.

Warm weather and swings in temperatures from warm to cold will increase problems with stored corn. Grain in storage needs to be under constant monitoring to insure its quality.

Implementing an effective pest control program and properly moving air through the grain bin will help to reduce the incidence of mold.

To Keep Calves Growing

Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, reminds us that getting young calves off to a good start is very important for the health of the calf and for future profits.

As soon as the calf is born, a race takes place in the calf's digestive tract to see who can get to the calf's intestines first and be absorbed into the bloodstream — infectious bacteria and other organisms or antibodies that protect calves from these invading organisms.

Thus, it is very important to separate the calf from its dam as soon as it is born so it does not consume any infectious organisms.

Also, dip its navel cord in tincture of iodine and to force feed the calf at least two quarts of high quality colostrum milk as soon as possible and another two quarts several hours latter.

Place the calf in an isolated pen and preserve its body temperature by drying it off and giving it a dry, clean, well-ventilated, and draft-free place to lie down. Feed the calf 10 percent of its weight in milk or high quality milk replacer per day (about four quarts per day for a 90-pound calf).

Also, provide water and calf starter pellets. When temperatures drop to 30 degrees F., increase energy intake by 10 percent and continue to increase energy intake by an additional 10 percent for each additional 10 degree drop in temperature.

To Install ROPS

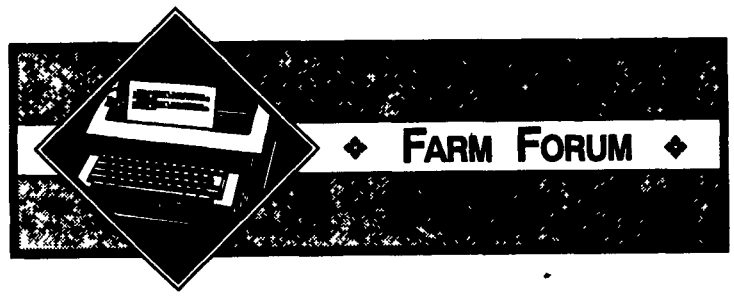
Tractor overturns continue to be one of the leading causes of farming-related deaths. It is estimated about two million tractors in use in North America still do not have a rollover protective structure (ROPS) and seatbelt.

Several major tractor manufacturers are offering and promoting low cost ROPS and seat belt retrofit kits for older tractors. Now would be a could time to visit your local equipment dealer and purchase and install ROPS and seat belt on all your tractors.

Most companies are selling the retrofit kits at cost and are not making any profits on them. By taking time now to purchase and install ROPS and seatbelt on your tractors could prevent a very serious injury or death to yourself, family member, or employee.

Let's work together to make farming a safer occupation!

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "A leader listens, not just hears."



Editor:

During the last several months a few Members of Congress and some farm organizations have devised some of the most irresponsible dairy legislation that we have ever witnessed. The barrage started out with Congressmen Robert's and Gunderson's Freedom to Farm Act, then got changed to the "Deregulation of the Dairy Industry."

Then various joint dairy reform packages were introduced. Following the introduction of draft #5 of the dairy reform package, the sponsors decided to change the name to the current title of Consensus Dairy Reform Package.

The continued changing of the proposed dairy legislation reminds me of my younger days when we used to play musical chairs at Grange Meetings. Those games were fun. However, the games these people in Washington are playing are going to have a devastating effect on the destiny of many of our dairy farmers.

The current proposed dairy package calls for the possibility of dairy farmers to pay for the processing cost to manufacture butter, powder and cheese from milk.

Part of the proposed bill grants certain administrative authority to the U.S.D.A. One of the reforms reads:

• To establish purchase prices for milk used to produce cheese, nonfat dry milk, whole dry milk, and butter based on national product prices minus a cost of processing (the "make allowance").

Earlier in the bill they establish the make allowance on cheese of $1.80 cwt and $1.65 cwt on butter/powder using California yields.

To me the above language is a clear indication that dairy farmers could very well be charged the

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN GOD SAYS "GO!"
February 4, 1996

WHEN GOD SAYS "GO!"
February 4, 1996

Background Scripture:
Jonah 1 through 2
Devotional Reading:
Jonah 2:2-9

Looking at it one way, we might say that Jonah scored 50 out of a possible 100 in responding to God's call. "Arise, go to Nineveh," said God and Jonah did "arise" and "go." Unfortunately, he went in the wrong direction!

He didn't want to go to Nineveh and prophesy, so instead he fled to Joppa and booked passage on a ship sailing to Tarshish. Twice in one verse the writer of the book points out that Jonah was attempting to flee "the presence of the Lord." From the safety of our own perspective we can smirk at Jonah's naivete — to think that he could get away from God! — yet, don't we sometimes do the same thing when God calls us? God says "Arise and go!" and we do — in the wrong direction.

Jonah probably assumed that this something was strictly between himself and the Lord. But it wasn't. While the ship is sailing to Tarshish, God causes a great storm and the ship is in danger of being swamped and sunk. Terrified and finding nothing else to save them, they cast lots to determine which of them is responsible for the wrath of God. And the lot falls upon Jonah. "What is this you have done?" they exclaim. For the men knew that he was fleeing from the presence of the Lord, because he had told them.

GO/NO GO

Jonah discovered quickly that his disobedience also affected others, in this case the mariners on the ship. Later, he realized that the people of Nineveh were also affected. When God says "Go" and we say "No," others are sure to be affected besides ourselves. I have come to the conclusion that, whenever there is someone in need, it is not because God has failed to send someone to help, but because he calls us and we fail to respond.

It is interesting that, when the storm first arose, the mariners did two things: they prayed and they threw the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it for them. But, no matter how much they threw into the sea, they could not lighten it enough. The disobedience of Jonah was heavier than all their wares.

Jonah, for all of his faults, was a man of some conscience. When the mariners ask him, "What shall we do to you, that the sea may quiet down for us?" he replies, "Take me up and throw me into the sea; then the sea will quiet down for you; for I know it is because of me that this great tempest has come upon you." If Jonah had lived in our own time, he probably would have made excuses or tried to pass the blame to someone else. But he owned up to his responsibility. We and our world need a good dose of that willingness to accept responsibility for our own behavior.

GIVE JONAH CREDIT

We need also to give Jonah credit for realizing that he needed God to rescue him from the belly of the great fish. What's so smart about that you may ask. The fact is that lots of us, even when we have been brought low by our own folly, would rather blunder on than admit we need help. If you don't believe that: have you ever driven in a car with someone who was lost but unwilling to stop and ask for directions? There's a perversity in human nature that makes it so painful to say: "I was wrong!"

So Jonah asks for God's help. The roles have been reversed: the ask-ee is now the ask-er. God had asked something of Jonah and he fled. Now, Jonah is asking something of God. Suppose God were to respond as Jonah did! Suppose he were to respond to us as we respond to him?

When God says "Go!" what do you say?

Mr. and Mrs. Althouse will lead a group to the Holy Land, Oct. 9 to Nov. 2, 1996. For information, write him at 4412 Shenandoah Ave., Dallas, TX 75205. Space is limited.

WILL THE IRS INHERIT YOUR ESTATE?

New York Life's Survivorship Whole Life policy was created to provide you and your spouse with life insurance coverage, and needed liquidity, when your estate taxes are due.

It works like this: When one spouse dies, the resulting estate tax can be deferred until after the death of the surviving spouse. At that time, the policy's proceeds become available, and can be used to help pay the usually heavy estate tax. In other words, New York Life makes the proceeds available when they"re needed the most.

You've worked hard all of your life, and shouldn't have to spend time worrying about what will happen to your estate. Call us for all the details and let us show you why New York Life is The Company You Keep.

Adams Holstein Club Sets Calendar

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.)—Closing in on a goal, the board of directors of the Adams County Holstein Club met Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 24, at the Penn State Extension Office to review progress with the membership drive and formalize a calendar of meetings and events for the coming year.

Kevin Holtzinger presided, while state director Marvin Brown, who is directing the membership drive, spoke about those efforts.

County Agent Thomas E. Piper reported that Galen Kopp, dairy agent and Kirby Horst, president of the Holstein Club in Lebanon County are developing an itinerary for hosting the Adams County Holstein Club to a tour being planned for April 9. Details will be announced later.

Charged with responsibility for organizing the dairy princess coronation, Josie Riser and Alan Zepp are to recruit prospective candidates and plan an appropriate event in early summer.

The board agreed to visit Mason-Dixon Farms Dairy for the annual summer twilight meeting. Josie Riser and John Clowney are to make arrangements.

A possible type classification meeting is contingent upon timing of official herd classification work and could be delayed until February 1997 at the Penn State Gate farm near Littlestown.

Chris Wood reported plans to take several junior members to the youth convention in Williamsport. She said she will seek to inspire interest in judging with participation in the Hoard's Dairyman Contest and by pushing for participation in the July 10-11 judging school in Lancaster County.

As fundraisers, John Clowney agreed to chair the ice cream sale at the Kingsdale Carnival in August. Chris Wood is to direct the cheese sale in the fall of 1996.

The board is to conclude the membership campaign at a spouse's night dinner meeting on Feb. 17. A director's picnic and meeting is to be held Sept. 15, and plans were initiated to hold the 45th annual banquet meeting on Thursday, Oct. 24.

Just before the meeting adjourned, Piper encouraged the directors to invite their dairy farmer neighbors to a Crops Day Program on Feb. 5, at the Adams County Extension Office where a portion of the program will be devoted to Nutrient Management plans and the efficient handling of hay in large round bales.

The Four Seasons of Grazing Teleconference is to be downlinked to the county office on Feb. 8; the Dairy Nutrition Workshop featuring current concepts in dairy nutrition will be offered on Feb. 22 and 29.

Also announced, a DHIA records workshop is to feature Dean Amick and David Shenk from the Pa. DHIA staff, and Dr. Larry Specht, an extension dairy specialist, from 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m., on Monday, Feb. 26, at the Adams County Extension Office.

Pa. Dairy Promotion Board Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program will host its 1996 Annual Meeting on Thursday, Feb. 22, at the Nittany Lion Inn, State College.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the program will open at 10 a.m.

This year's featured speaker will be Cliff Schwandner from the advertising agency Leo Burnett to highlight the successful national fluid milk advertising campaign, "got milk?". The "got milk?" campaign was launched nationwide in 1995 and has received numerous advertising creative awards and positive response from consumers.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling the Dairy Promotion office at (717) 787-6903 by Feb. 15.

Farm Market Owners Can Learn Ways To Capture, Keep Customers

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Owners of farm markets could lose lots of ground to their competition — one-stop supermarkets — in the coming years unless they learn how to capture and keep their loyal customers.

Nearly 70 owners of farm markets throughout Pennsylvania and surrounding states attended a special marketing short course which examined customer service and special events at retail farm markets. The course was held Thursday morning at the annual Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference and Trade Show at the Hershey Convention Center.

The key is to recognize how important your loyal customers are to the farm market business, according to Robert Matarazzo, president of RJM Marketing, Belvidere, N.J., as well as owner of a 392-acre fruit and vegetable farm and winery.

The past president of the Vegetable Growers Association of N.J. said that "the customers you take care of are going to generate new customers for you," he said. "Focus your time and energy and customers that really take care of you."

Rather than spending money on trying to attract new customers, Matarazzo believes it is far more important to spend $1,200 or so on developing a mailing list of your repeat customers.

Matarazzo told the farm marketers at the short course two follow two rules: spend 60 percent of your marketing budget to take care of your existing customers and the other 40 percent on new customers. The rule of marketing is that 80 percent of your sales are going to come from about 20 percent of your customer base.

Matarazzo, who holds special events throughout the season at his farm market, gave a series of tips for the marketers to help them develop a customer base. They include greeting the customers warmly, asking them questions that cannot be answered with a yes or no, and offering information about the business to educate the customer.

Many of the customers to his market drive for 40-70 miles simply for the special events held during various times of the year. This is the 75th year the Matarazzo family has been in the vegetable business.

Holding special drawings and other contests can help marketers develop a mailing list. From this, a "preferred customer list" that make up a select percentage can be the list on which future sales can be made.

It is important to let customers know of the "proprietary relationship you have with the customer," and to make the customer believe it is "their business," he said.

Matarazzo detailed a variety of ways to develop fliers for mailing to the customer list. He publishes a special newspaper, The Matarazzo Times.

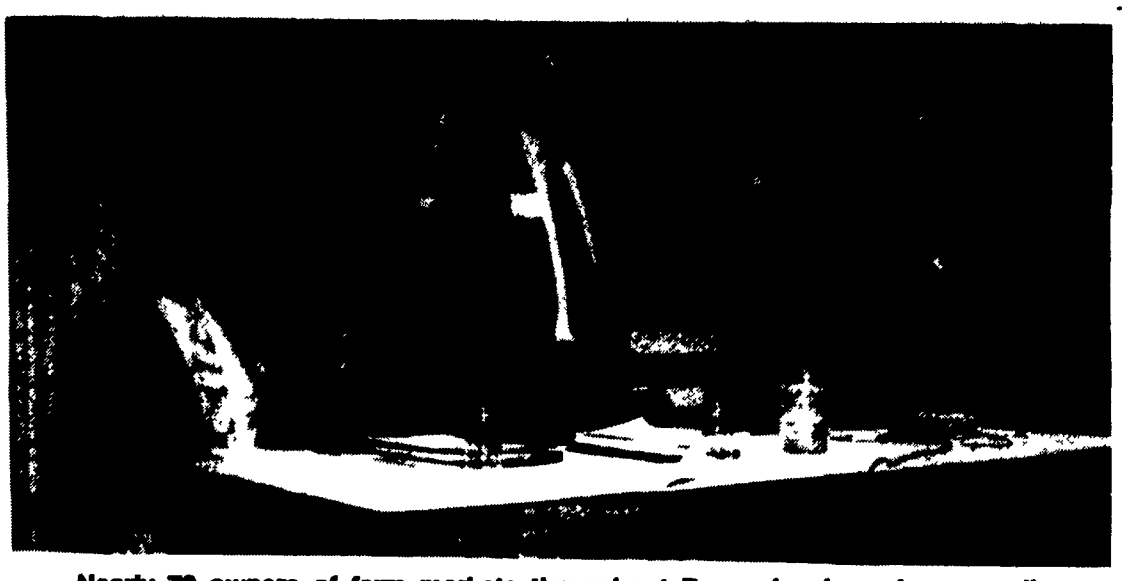
In a separate discussion, Matarazzo spoke about ways to write and develop news releases, which promote credibility for your farm market. He emphasized the importance of developing a "relationship with your press people" and providing information about special events. It is important to write the release in such a way that makes it "a community event."

Marketers must takes steps now to ensure customer loyalty because of the encroachment of one-stop supermarkets on the highly competitive fresh vegetable and fruit roadside markets.

"We used to say, pile it high and watch them buy," said James Lincoln, extension agent and horticultural specialist at Michigan State. "Now it takes a lot more than that to continue to be successful in farm marketing."

Lincoln said the big supermarkets are using some of the successful techniques of roadside and farm markets to promote products — luring people away from the traditional farm market.

As a result, farm market operators have to adjust and try to compete by providing a lot more variety of products. Marketers must try to promote more convenience and color at the market and hold more special events.



Nearly 70 owners of farm markets throughout Pennsylvania and surrounding states attended a special marketing short course which examined customer service and special events at retail farm markets. A panel looked at ways to handle and merchandise produce. From left, Fred Davis, multicounty financial management agent, moderator; Jim Lincoln, extension agent, Michigan State; and Robert Matarazzo, president of RJM Marketing.

According to Lincoln, the "entertainment farming" aspect continues to get more crucial in order for many to survive.

Also at the short course, Dr. Ramu Govindasamy, marketing specialist for Rutgers University in New Jersey, provided details of a survey of New Jersey direct marketing operations conducted in 1992.

Of 1,000 questionnaires mailed out to marketers in New Jersey, 450 were returned, according to Govindasamy. The data were compiled and analyzed to determine exactly what marketers were doing.

Most of the growers (32.6 percent) grew less than six acres of crops. Some of them (5.5 percent) grew more than 100 acres of crops.

About half the marketers (47.7 percent) grew nearly all the products sold at the stand. Most (about 50.6 percent) don't sell related products, such as T-shirts, mugs, etc. On advertising, 36 pecent spend nothing while about 5.25 percent spend $10,000 or more per year, and also have the highest sales.

Of the advertising, most (61.2 percent) go by word of mouth. The rest include newspapers (58 percent) and signs (55.9 percent). In only 2.7 percent of the cases is TV used to advertise.

What Will Be Tomorrow's Tomato Plant?

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — This is a glimpse of what "tomorrow's tomato plant" will look like.

It will have a shortened fruit maturation (SFM) cycle, meaning less time to market. It will exhibit compact growth, so it won't need to be caged or staked. It will have a high population of fruit set, grown on a shorter row, with large fruit size. And the fruit will taste great.

The seeds for the "tomato of tomorrow" are being worked on today at North Carolina State University, according to Dr. Randy Gardener of the Mountain Research Station in Fletcher, N.C.

Gardener spoke to about 100 tomato producers and agri-industry representatives during a portion of the annual Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference and Trade Show on Wednesday afternoon.

Gardener is helping to spearhead research on the "tomorrow" tomato variety that will combine a lot of different characteristics, including insect and disease resistance, to be available commercially within five years.

He revealed some of the research under way at North Carolina at the vegetable conference.

Gardener said that the environment in North Carolina for tomato production is similar to those faced by growers in Pennsylvania. They

DAVE SLUSSER
General Manager
Pennsylvania DHIA

During the last quarter of 1995, Pa. DHIA set a new course for DHIA nationally with the introduction of two new services — MUN - Milk Urea Nitrogen analysis, and Performance Economics.

DHIA will never be the same again.

From now on dollars and cents issues that affect your bottom line will rule the day. Pa. DHIA can enhance the dairymen's profit and lifestyle.

Pa. DHIA introduced MUN analysis to dairy farmers at 15 cents per cow and developed the first MUN summary report.

The report was developed by our own farmer-owned DRPC (Dairy Records Processing Center) to do two things — provide summary information in usable form for dairy farmer members and farm consultants, and collect that data and forward it to dairy nutrition researchers.

The short term benefits are already saving our members money and the long-term benefits from research will improve the value of the information to our members in the future.

Our efficient business style has allowed us to provide this service at 15 cents per cow. Others have copied us but no one can profitably beat us.

The new course set by Performance Economics will, for the first time ever in DHIA, provide a confidential way to incorporate your operating cost into the system.

Production cost analysis and net income figures on cows, groups, and the herd will be reported to you monthly at unbelievable speed and include 12-month rolling net income averages. On top of that, you receive a 10-month projected cash income.

All of this information will be on reports that you are already accustomed to reading, and it is free to Pa. DHIA members.

Over the years we have been pushing higher production to increase profitability, however, until now we could not provide net profit. Now we know that high production does not always mean higher profit.

Let's say you want to try a new feed additive that the sales person says will increase your production 2 pounds per cow per day. You know the 2 pounds of milk per cow will increase your gross income, but will it increase your net income?

You can try the feed additive for a couple of months and see if your net income per cow goes up. Or you could just give it to a small group of cows and compare the net for that group with the rest of the herd. Now you can answer the age old question, "Is there any money left over for me?"

DHIA has always provided you with management information on records, reproduction, genetics, udder health, etc. on a historical basis. The new generation DHIA pioneered by Pa. DHIA will include what we have always done, however now add herd economic performance, and projection into the future.

We are excited about our service to you. For more information on the new generation DHIA, contact a Pa. DHIA technician or call 1-800-344-8378 (1-800-DHI-TEST—. We can put you on MUN test and Performance Economics immediately.

What Will Be Tomorrow's Tomato Plant?

have air conditions in N.C., however, that make it hard to grow an early variety. And they have similar disease problems as growers here.

For N.C. growers (many who produce about 5-10 acres of fresh table crop), the best way to get good production is to have a "good, large, healthy plant in the field," said Gardener.

Most seeds are germinated about Feb. 20-25 and transplants are placed in the field from April 5-10. Using a system of large plants that have already flowered has enabled the growers to get early production.

North Carolina State University is known for the development of the "Mountain" varieties of fresh market tomato, including Mountain Spring and Mountain Fresh.

Work began in the 1980s to develop a variety that could tolerate cooler or hotter growing conditions, promote uniform ripening, and work on obtaining a desired glossy fruit. Importantly, "growers want big fruit — that's what they can get money for," said Gardener.

The earlier, the better. It shows up in how much growers can obtain for their crop if available for consumers early in June. Growers a few years back were paid about $50 per bushel for the earlier crop.

Most earliness in tomatoes is based on early flowering.

As a result, more work is under way in determining how to get a shortened fruit maturation (SFM) cycle, which is the decrease in number of days from flowering to when fruit starts to ripen.

Gardener showed several varieties that showed great promise on SFM development. Many were crossed with early maturing cherry tomatoes. The key was to combine the genes of the SFM varieties with the large fruit set varieties and keep the SFM characteristics in line.

After obtaining the genetic line, Gardener admitted he was impressed with the fact that a good tasting tomato was also obtained.

Research also examined some of the cull factors of tomatoes — those characteristics that resulted in culled tomatoes. They included the primary factor, rough blossom scar, and fruit cracking. Many varieties were developed with good resistance to fruit cracking, but the blossom scars are still a challenge.

Varieties were developed for other characteristics, as well, including high temperature stress, better vine-ripening, resistance to foliar diseases such as early and late blight and fusarium wilt, and extended shelf life. The foliar disease challenges were met in several popular varieties, including Mountain Supreme and Mountain Fresh. The biggest concern is still early and late blight.

Some growers return to the fields on a 5-day schedule to battle early blight. And this gets expensive. As a result, varieties were developed to cut the application frequencies to every 10 days.

Work is under way also on developing compact plant types, which allow spreading on a mulch row without staking. This compact growth system is still being researched and could be close enough economically to the staked system to be viable.

USB To Examine Return On Checkoff Dollar Investment

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The chairman of the United Soybean Board (USB) was clear in his intentions: find out exactly what the return on soybean dollar investment is.

John Becherer, CEO of the United Soybean Board, told producers at Tuesday's Pennsylvania Crops Conference that the board has undertaken its own fact-finding mission, with the aid of Texas A&M University, to find out what the return on soybean checkoff dollars is for the producers, and share that information with producers.

The information would be available to producers in about one year, said Becherer.

About 60 producers were on hand at the soybean portion of the Pennsylvania Crops Conference in Carlisle to hear the long-range strategic plan of the USB.

The goal of the organization raise the total U.S. soybean exports to 60 percent of the world market, and market about 350 million bushels of soybeans per year to other parts of the world, including the southeast Asian rim countries. Also, a part of the plan involves increasing new uses of soybeans by 300 million bushels per year by the year 2005, of which would be an increase in utilization of U.S. domestic market share of soybeans by 150 million bushels. The board plans to evaluate new uses of soybeans through research and promotion.

Family, Friends Gather To Celebrate Lancaster Extension Accomplishments

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — In these trying times, it's important every once in a while to get together and simply celebrate the accomplishments of all family members, according to a Penn State family studies specialist.

With that in mind, about 160 Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Association family and friends met at the association's 83rd annual meeting at the Farm and Home Center on Thursday night.

Before Dr. Jim Van Horn, Penn State family studies specialist, spoke about the changing face of the traditional American family, extension guests sampled lots of traditional Lancaster County food, from some of the finest slow-cooked top round barbecued beef, to raspberry ice cream milkshakes, to western-style egg omelets, to apple cider and lots of other goodies.

Dr. John Schwartz, extension director, provided an overview of the accomplishments of the close-knit extension family, thanking many who supported the accomplishents of extension in a variety of ways.

The extension distributed nearly 200,000 newsletters and educational publications to county individuals, and more than 26,000 people were assisted through the efforts of extension personnel. About 5,000 meetings were held, reaching nearly 62,000 people.

There are 3,312 4-H members enrolled in more than 5,000 4-H projects in the county. County agents put on a variety of radio programs, and five of the agents write their own personel columns for newspapers in the county.

In the past year, according to Schwartz, 17 meetings were held in the county on reassessment and Act 319, with about 2,100 people attending.

Schwartz presented the accomplishments of a wide range of support services at the extension. In addition, the strong Master Gardener program, numnbering 73, logged more than 1,500 hours of service and answered 5,700 questions, according to Schwartz.

Schwartz commended the "strong, traditional 4-H program" in the county, with a very successful 4-H livestock program. The 4-H program included top prizes in youth market sheep and beef at the state Farm Show.

Roger Rohrer presented the treasurer's report at the meeting. The county commissioners approved $364,250 worth of appropriations for the association in 1995. Interest earned in the past year for the association totalled $2,190, for a total income of $366,440 in 1995. Total expenses for the year were $348,173.49 with a margin at the end of 1995 of $18,266.51.

Awards were presented to various contributors to extension education. One, the Groundwater Guardian Award, was presented to Ellen Dewey and Leon Ressler of the Lancaster Groundwater Policy Education Project. Another went to Brenda Stallman for her service to extension.

Also, directors were elected to serve on the association. Re-elected to three-year terms were Thelma Wolgemuth, Mount Joy, for the northwest district, and Pat Witmer, Lititz, northeast district. Elected to the southwest district was J. Edwin Kilheffer, Millersville. Elected to the southeast district was Gary Dean, Strasburg. Elected to the southern district was Donald Trimble, Peach Bottom.

Pa. Forage And Grassland Council Honors Achievements

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — Several members of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) on Tuesday were presented with awards recognizing practices and efforts that reflect the goals of advancing knowledge and sound stewardship associated with grasses and forages.

The award presentations were made during a luncheon meeting of the PFGC held in conjunction with the annual 1996 Pennsylvania Crops Conference at the Embers Inn, in Carlisle.

The crops conference is an annual event sponsored by the PFGC, the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, the Pennsylvania Soybean Board, and the Pennsylvania State University Extension.

During the presentation ceremony, three award recipients were acknowledged, and three class winners of the 1995 Ag Progress Days Hay Show were presented with awards.

A PFGC Special Award is the highest recognition the organization bestows. The award is a recognition of an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC, as well as an outstanding contribution to the state's forage and livestock industry or conservation farming.

Dr. James Starling, who in December was named interim dean of the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences, was named the recipient of the Special Award.

A member of the PFGC, he has served on its board of directors and as its president in 1968. While head of the Penn State Agronomy Department (1969-1985), he was a strong supporter of the PFGC and its programs, and that support has continued.

Starling also was a research project leader in forage crop breeding and genetics with the primary responsibility of studying perennial grass breeding and genetics, as well as teaching graduate students applied statistics.

He started at Penn State in 1954 as a graduate assistant in 1954 and joined the agronomy faculty in 1957. He earned a bachelor degree in agronomy from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, and a master and doctorate in agronomy from Penn State.

In addition to serving the Grassland Council, he has been a member of the Pennsylvania Plant Food and Protectant Educational Society, and the Northeast Branch of the American Society of Agronomy.

Clyde Myers, an extension agent for Berks County, was recognized as the recipient of the organization's Teaching/Extension Award, because of his efforts and dedication to providing his area's farmers with education and delivering useful information about grasses and forages, as well as his leadership.

According to a statement by the PFGC, "Clyde is recognized by his peers as an excellent reacher and provider of outstanding leadership. He has initiated many educaitonal programs in Berks County as nationwide.

Pennsylvania producers could make wide use of a checkoff similar to bordering states such as New York and Maryland. Maryland collects ½ of 1 percent of the seller's price. In Maryland, the checkoff is assessed at point of sale.

Rakestraw said that a board will be appointed by the Pennsylvania state governor, coordinated by the ag secretary, to determine how the checkoff will be assessed and how the checkoff dollars would be allocated.

This would affect 25,000 farmers in Pennsylvania that grow corn. Rakestraw indicated that it would affect only corn grown and sold in Pennsylvania and not affect corn grown and used right on the farm.

The checkoff may be necessary because of the dwindling amount of federal support for corn promotion and research.

"If there was any time we needed self-help, it's probably now," Rakestraw said.

The logistics of checkoff collection will need to be assessed further by the PMCGA. More information will be available on the possible referendum later.

Greg Roth, Penn State agronomy associate professor, said that it is a "difficult thing to grow excellent corn yields," and hasn't "completely figured it out yet" before he presented the awards for the Five-Acre Corn Club contest during the conference luncheon.

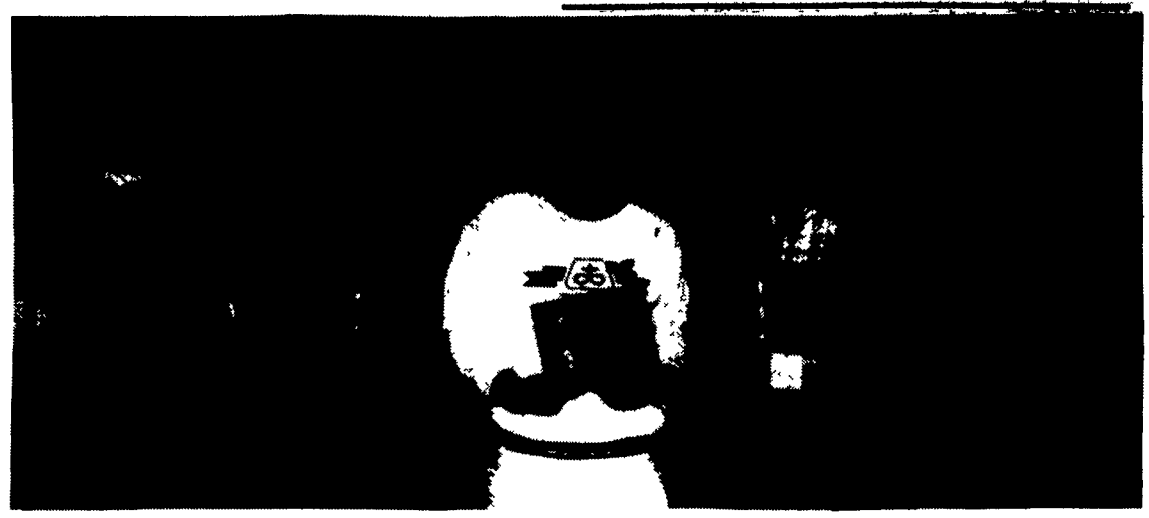
Roth noted the achievements of Ronks corn grower Jack Coleman, who had yields of 228.7 bushels per acre, which is second to the national contest winner by "8/100 of a bushel." It proves that some Pennsylvania soils can rival some of the best soils in the Corn Belt.

There were 118 fields in the contest this year, which averaged under .150 bushels per acre.

Following is a result of placings in the contest.

In the three year average category, shelled grain class, regular harvest size, first place went to Herman Manbeck, Womelsdorf, for an average of 199.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3293 and 3394. Second place went to Elder Vogel, Rochester, for 193.6 bushels per acre using Funks 4260 and 4446A. Third went to Mathew Maximuck, Doylestown, with 191.8 bushels per acre using Dekalb 623.

In the three year average, three-acre-plus harvest size, first place went to Richard Kreider, Lebanon, for 185.7 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394 and 3335. Second place went to Daryl Alger, Palmyra, for 182.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3293 and 3394. Third place went to Carl T. Shaffer, Mifflinville, with a 182.1 per acre yield using Pioneer 3394 and 3525.



Second and third place winners of the Five-Acre Corn Club contest, from left, D. Mark Crist, Jersey Shore, third place, ear corn class, hand harvest size; Bill Keeney, Wyalusing, second place, ear corn class, hand harvest; Daryl Alger, Palmyra, second place, three-year-average award, shelled grain class, three-acre-plus harvest size; Clarence Keener, Manheim, third place, shelled grain class, three-acre-plus harvest size; and Lloyd George, Catawissa, third place, shelled grain class, regular harvest size.

In the three year average, regular harvest size, first place went to Thomas Pepper, Canton, for a 200.3 bushel per acre average using Dekalb 646 and Pioneer 3293. Third place went to Eugene Graham, Cranberry, for a 175.8 bushel per acre yield using Pioneer 3394.

In the shelled grain class, regular harvest size, first place went to Ed Snook, Jersey Shore, for a yield of 223.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3217. Second place went to Floyd Kurtz, Fleetwood, for 199 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335. Third place went to Lloyd George, Catawissa, for a 198.6 bushel per acre yield using Pioneer 3394.

In the shelled grain class, three-acre-plus harvest size, first place wen to Jack Coleman, Ronks, for a 228.7 bushel per acre yield using Pioneer 3335. Second place went to Ernest Mast, Morgantown, for a 205.1 bushel per acre yield using Pioneer 3394. York Holstein Club Celebrates Half-Century Mark

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Annual dues were one dollar, and 23 members joined that first year.

The year was 1946. World War II had passed into a sad chapter of history, tractors were becoming more commonplace on farms, and artificial insemination of cattle was still the stuff of science fiction and university researchers.

But the breeding of purebred Holstein cattle was alive and well, even thriving, in York County. So, in order to better educate themselves and promote their black-and-white cows, a handful of forward-looking agriculture leaders met on November 26, 1946, at the York Post Office building, and organized the York County Holstein Breeders Association.

A salute to its first 50 years was part of the recent 1996 annual York Holstein Association's annual meeting, January 18. Speakers included national Holstein president John Cope, Grantham, and Pennsylvania Holstein Association executive secretary Bill Nichol, who shared some of their memories of past years of involvement with the black and white cow.

Jonas Gruver was elected the first president of the club, serving in that capacity for several consecutive years. Vice-president was Herman Stebbins and William Raab was named the secretary-treasurer. Other directors included John Murphy, Newton Bair, Michael Whiteford and William Brown, the state director. Committees appointed were for membership, show and sale, and junior project.

According to the minutes of that formation meeting, Norman Rishel turned over a small treasury balance from the "old association." No records have been found detailing what organization may have been the forerunner to the present York County club. Income during the first year included a $60, third-place prize won by the York County herd at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, while total expense for the year was a $6.95 charge for membership cards.

Club size grew rapidly, with an additional nine members joining during 1947. The first club calf was awarded in 1948, to David Miller, Jr., after he was named the 4-H Club Winner. A field-day held in 1948 included the still-popular cattle judging contest, including a division for the ladies.

A 1950 banquet meeting offered a bit of deja vu to many of today's dairy meetings. Featured speaker Joe Taylor discussed a "trend toward commercialization on dairy farms," as well as offered tips on operating more efficiently. Later that year, the Holstein club sponsored a float in a local agriculture parade.

Minutes of a directors meeting in 1952 report a "lively discussion on the much debated question of color restrictions." Plans were also underway for a Holstein tour, to be held the following summer. And, in 1953, another meeting discussion centered on the appointment of a committee to act on a project of getting grade cattle owners to change to purebreds.

More than a quarter-century later, in 1979, the York County Holstein Association held its first Calfarama Sale. The 49 head in the sale averaged $1009.49. High average for the several years of calf sales came in 1982, when 41 head averaged $1082.19.

A York County Holstein Hall of Fame was initiated in 1982, honoring two of the pioneering women from the early years of the club, Mabel Rishel and Margie Gruver. Subsequent inductees into the county's Hall of Fame include Herman Stebbins, 1983; David Miller, 1986; John T. Smith, 1988; Paul King, 1991; E. Wayne Beshore, 1992; and Ira L. Boyer, 1993.

Reviewing 50 years of growth and making plans for the next one are York County Holstein leaders, from left, seated, Bridgette Bortner, secretary-treasurer, Tom Taylor, president and April Cooper, vice-president; second row, directors Darla Doll, Norma Lucabaugh and Phil Laughman; third row, state director Frank Feeser, directors Leroy Walker and Ed Calhoun.

Many of the projects and programs started in those early years of Holstein Association work continue today in York County. At its recent reorganization meeting, the board of directors elected Tom Taylor, Delta, as president. April Cooper, Delta, is vice-president and Bridgette Bortner, Seven Valleys, was elected secretary-treasurer. State director is Frank Feeser, Hanover. Committee chairs are Frank Feeser, tour; Leroy Walker, barn meeting; Tom Taylor, county show; Bridgette Bortner, banquet; and Darla Doll, picnic. Other directors include Norma Lucabaugh, Phil Laughman and Ed Calhoun.

A two-day tour to Holstein herds in northern Pennsylvania is tentatively scheduled for March 27-28. Cost of the overnight tour is $80 per person or $115 per two, and includes bus and lodging. No meals are included in the cost. Reservations are on a first-come, first-serve basis and are open to members from York and other counties. For additional information or reservations, contact tour chairman Frank Feeser, phone 717-637-7458.

The York County Holstein Show is scheduled for Wednesday, July 31, at the York Fairgrounds. Other events planned by the county club, but not yet scheduled, include a barn meeting, picnic and annual banquet.

York Chamber Names Ag Winners

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.)—"I learned to spell 'no' in about second grade. But I never learned to say it," Bill Buser says.

Buser, his wife, Pat, and their children have been selected the 1996 Farm Family of the Year by the York Chamber of Commerce. The recognition was presented as a highlight of the Chamber's annual agriculture recognition banquet, held January 23 at Wisehaven Hall.

Bill Buser suspects his inability to say "no" to agriculture and community involvement played a large role in the family's selection for the honor. The York farmer has served as president of the county's Farm Bureau organization for several years, hosted and helped organize the Chamber's 1995 farm tour in November and frequently hosts school groups to the family farm to teach them about growing food. He serves on the agriculture advisory committee at Eastern High School as well.

The Buser family crops 1,000 acres to wheat, soybeans, corn and hay, and raises beef and hogs. Bill and Pat began farming in 1957 at his parents' farm, then later moved to a rented dairy farm at Zion's View for six years. In 1971, they purchased and returned to the Buser home farm, adding a new 80-cow dairy stall barn.

After Bill suffered a serious injury in a tree accident in 1981, the dairy herd was sold to concentrate instead on crops and livestock. Son Rich now runs the 3,300 head hog herd, while son Bob is a partner on the crops farm. Pat works along with her husband and sons on the crops operation and is a skilled operator of all the field equipment.

Sharing the Chamber award spotlight as Agribusiness of the Year was Ken Potter, owner of Martin's Potato Chips, Inc. Potter stepped into the snack food business in 1971, when he purchased a single delivery truck. The firm now processes a half-million pounds of potatoes per week.

Now, Martin's Chips keeps a fleet of more than 75 trucks on the road hauling chips and related snack foods to five states. Ultimately, Potter hopes to serve snack lovers up and down the pay off — he said that work to get a vote in the U.S. Senate for corn growers, as related to ethanol as a fuel additive, came down to a tie, all because of work done earlier to convince a certain Senator about the importance of ethanol use.

The tie was broken in favor of corn growers by Vice President Al Gore, who presides over the U.S. Senate. Wagner said the key, however, was the fact that it took lobbying efforts to first achieve the tie.

The Farm Bill negotiations are mixed and Wagner said that, among others, goals sought for corn growers are for flexibility in the new Farm Bill, to allow planting for markets and not support programs, and to create a seven-year weaning program to eliminate support programs that would coincide with a seven-year budget balancing transition. (In later remarks he said dairy objectives include eliminating the milk-check assessment that was part of the budget reconcilliation act.

Among the political things of which producers should be aware is the fact that production farmers represent less than 2 percent of the voting citizenry and that representation is decreasing, therefore requiring more strength from representative organizations and more of a solid agreement within the industry.

However, no matter what, he said that change is coming.

In effect, what Wagner said was that political maneuvering is holding up progress on effectively dealing with a Farm Bill.

He said that with Sen. Richard Lugar, Sen. Bob Dole and others running for president, as well as President Clinton running for re-election, and the differences between Senate and House Republicans over the budget and Farm Bill, "We have a mix of scenarios we've never seen before."

Some of the problem has been attempts to ram through legislation without opportunity for debate by not only other legislators of both parties, but also without allowing review and comment by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

And, while some are making efforts to extend the 1990 Farm Bill, the National Corn Growers can't support extending the program, because changes are sought and it's too close to planting. People have to know what to expect before they start putting seeds into the ground, that what is done won't hurt them for making decisions amid indecision and political positioning by the nation's legislators.

The extremism of the so-called freshman Republicans and the unyielding, irrational or even childish actions of some of those in political power in Washington is somewhat unnerving, according to Wagner.

"In all the years, I don't believe I've seen people dug in so hard and so firm as on this issue," he said of the budget the Farm Bill and those issuing positions.

And while, Wagner said that Sen. Lugar introduced into the Senate a proposal called the Agricultural Market Transition Program (the new Farm Bill) that would having sweeping changes, Wagner said he didn't think it would pass.

"Right now I don't think it will pass the Senate, and the President will veto it as it stands," Wagner said.

Sen. Bob Dole said he didn't think he could get it put on to a continuing resolution, according to Wagner.

Also, Wagner said that from the corn and grain growers' perspective, the Farm Bill needs to be settled now. "They start harvesting wheat about May 10 in Texas," he said, and producers need to know where they stand.

Or else, without a Farm Bill or an extension, he said the program would automatically revert to 1948 Farm Bill provisions which would include a parity payment for wheat and the price would go to $7 per bushel — an unlikely scenario.

Wagner said that if the most recent proposal is not passed and the nation's politicians can't resolve the issue, Dan Glickman, the USDA secretary, is pushing for the extension of the 1990 Farm Bill, which Wagner said is unacceptable to corn growers.

If an extension of the '90 Farm Bill is done, Wagner said he didn't expect any participants in Ohio, as the high price of corn is expected to cause more people to plant corn and more on land that had been included under the Conservation Reserve Program under the Farm Bill. Which could very well mean increased problems with soil erosion in some areas.

He said the political position on the Farm Bill in Washington is "changing almost hourly."

Feb. 26 is the target date for passing legislation to change the federal government's debt limit. Wagner said, "My guess is (a Farm Bill) will be attached to that bill."

Some others say "no," Wagner said, unless there is some "tweaking" of loan rates and more money for rural development.

Wagner said that with $3.50 per bushel corn, and with 1994 production being a record and no carryover into 95 that wasn't used, and because of increased uses thanks to research efforts of the the corn check-off, there is going to be a need for corn.

However, the position of the corn growers is to establish a stable market. "Our philosophy is we'd rather have $2.85 corn year after year, than $3.50 one year and $1.50 the next."

He urged the audience to go home and write to their federal representatives and to say, "We support (Senate Bill 1541 and House Bill 2854), and we need them as an industry."

Rutgers, Penn State Offer Horse Barn Manager's Course

STROUDSBURG (Monroe Co.) — A barn manager's equine short course is to be offered by Cooperative Extension of Rutgers and Penn State Universities.

The course should help answer such questions as:

Can you legally hire an employee and pay cash "under the table" or provide board in exchange for work?

What is new in the world of horse fencing, barn flooring materials, and arena footing?

Can written contracts and releases protect you in the event of a liability law suit?

These and other issues will be addressed at the barn manager's short course which is to be held on March 13 and 14, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Holiday Inn, Route 512, Bethlehem.

The equine short course has been developed as a cooperative effort by extension agents from Penn State and Rutgers Universities.

A high caliber of professionals in the equine field have agreed to serve as instructors for the short course. Speakers include representatives from Footings Unlimited, Stocton Fence Company, Penn State and Rutgers Extension, Glatfelter Insurance Group, and Keystone Farm Credit.

Sessions will be offered on insurance, pasture maintenance, buying quality horse hay, liability issues, biology of pest control, new footing and fencing materials, budgeting for success, and proper ventilation of horse barns.

In addition, several owners and managers of area horse farms will be present to share their ideas on how to "manage for success."

The cost of the two-day program is $70, which includes lunch and instructional materials.

To receive more information or a registration form, contact your local Cooperative Extension Office or the Monroe County extension office at (717) 992-7344, the Montgomery County Extension Office at (610) 489-4315, or the Warren County Extension Office at (908) 475-6503.

Westmoreland Crops Day Set

Wednesday evening starts with registration from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. followed by training sessions until 9:30 p.m. to update participants on pesticide handling. Attendance is worth two core and two category points, equivalent to 1 credit.

Thursday's day session begins with registration and visits of commercial exhibits at 9 a.m.

At 10 a.m., Dr. Greg Roth, with the Penn State Agronomy Department, is to discuss how hybrid selection, population densities and rotations affect the yield of corn silage.

At 11 a.m., Dr. Doug Beegle, also with the Penn State Agronomy Department, is to discuss corn silage and also developing a nutrient management program.

Lunch is to start at 11:45 a.m. Those wishing to eat lunch must register and the cost is $8 per person. Checks should be made payable to: Westmoreland County Extension Fund. Call the extension office at (412) 837-1402.

make allowance cost.

As we have said many times before, isn't it interesting that our elected officials can always find ways to cover everyone else's costs, but they don't want to listen to legislation that could be geared to cover the dairy farmer's cost.

Since the early 80s dairy farmers have been shackled with all kinds of assessments and the reward they receive is lower and lower prices. Now along comes some people with a less than brilliant idea to charge dairy farmers the make allowance cost. The sad thing is the new dairy package is going to be part of a new version of the Freedom To Farm Act and because the 1990 Farm Bill has expired; this all means the new act is picking up democrat as well as republican support and will probably have passed the House Ag Committee by the time you read this article.

Recently we were somewhat taken to task because we reported that it appeared the National Milk Producers Federation were supporting Gunderson's Bill to have dairy farmers pay the make allowance costs. Last week when Congressman Gunderson announced the new Consensus Dairy Reform Package, do you know who was standing along side him? It happened to be Jim Barr, C.E.O. of the National Milk Producers Federation.

retained earnings may be lower, but members received these extra moneys during the year.

Expenses for the cooperative were held level even though a new building and additional truck leases were initiated during the year. The one dark cloud over the market is the pending sale of the Lehigh Valley plants that use a considerable amount of Mt. Joy's production. Until this sale has been completed, the contract with Lehigh Valley has not been renewed. Officials were optimistic that when the sale of the plants is completed, a contract with the new owner will also be forthcoming.

To enhance the position of the local cooperative, an affiliation with Dairylea Cooperative was proposed. Members voted to change the by-laws to accommodate this affiliation.

Don Risser, president, said in his report that the year would be remembered for the move into the new facilities. He said 500 people attended the open house and was a success.

In addition, the cooperative started to offer an HMO hospitalization plan for members, and they made special pricing arrangement on diesel fuel for members.

Two retiring directors were honored. Dave Landis served nine years and was the cooperative's treasurer. Roy Algyer had been elected to the board in 1968 and served 28 years. During these years he served as president, vice president, and representative to the Atlantic Processing board and the Dairy Council of greater Philadelphia.

The cooperative's top producers were: Brubaker Farms, 7,902,356; John Landis, 7,307,781; Kenneth Zurin, 5,753,574; Arlin Benner, 3,909,086; Frank Graybill, 3,527,467; Meadow Vista, 3,461,074; George Rohrer, 3,461,084; Millstone Acres, 3,333,624; Ken Balmer, 3,272,008; and J. Richard Groff, 3,021,008.

The honor roll included: Abe Shelly, Jr., Brubaker Farms, Jay Martin, Gilbert Breneman, Irvin Brubaker, David Harnish, George Rohrer, Gary Mase, Gary Forney, Leonard R. Nolt, Galen Z. Martin, and Nathan Stoltzfus. Shelly, Harnish, and Galen Martin also made the inspection honor roll with 95 points or better for the past year.

In the election of directiors Ken Balmer, J. Richard Groff, and Ken Miller were named to a three year terms; Dale Hershey was elected a one year term to finish the term of a retiring director.

USB To Examine Return On Checkoff

The USB, said Becherer, intends to do all it can to "meet a 3-billion-bushel demand of soybeans by the year 2005."

He said, "We do have goals, and our farmers have put themselves behind these goals."

Right now, the USB is intent on finding out the return on investment data reaching back 25 years. The data is available to look at exactly how the checkoff has paid off for producers.

The board itself, now five years old, is "still young, and in the process of fine-tuning" said Becherer. He said the board recently started a request for proposals to use some of the checkoff dollars for research and deveopment, and received 18 proposals two years ago.

Last year, the USB received about 245 proposals, "a huge stack of documents," to see how checkoff dollars can be put to work.

The USB wants to "move forward very effectively" in seeing how checkoff can be spent on development of markets for growers, said Becherer. In the meantime, the board wants to enhance communication of USB information to producers and the public.

Speaker Says Dairy Farmers Need To Change

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — To be successful in dairy farming over the next 10 years, you will need to reduce your capital and labor investment per 100 pounds of milk produced. That's the message Normand St. Pierre, featured speaker at the Pennfield Dairy Days, told the group of farmers gathered at Yoder's Restaurant Wednesday.

Using a Cornell University study that showed 300 head herds were more profitable than 125 cow herds, St. Pierre dug into the numbers to see why these larger herds had higher returns.

Most significantly, the larger herds have an average of $6,000 total investment per cow, and the smaller herds have an average of $8,000 per cow. Translated into cost per hundred pounds of milk produced, that is a savings of $2 just on capital investments.

"If smaller herds are to compete on a capital basis, something will need to be done with the smaller herd to reduce this cost," St. Pierre said. "The equipment charge per 100 pounds of milk produced on the smaller farms is twice what it is on larger farms. To be competitive, the smaller herd owners will need to regroup their resources to put more money into cows and less into buildings, land, and equipment."

"Multi-diversified farms cannont compete on a capital basis," St. Pierre said. "And you would not think it would be true, but average production on the smaller farms is lower than on the larger farms. What I think is happening is that the operator on the smaller farm is a 'jack of all trades.' He has to be the accountant, the machinery expert, the crop manager, and everything else. This dilutes his efforts towards the cows. He wastes a lot of time going from one job to another, and he does not have time to spend with the cows."

This leads to the second large difference St. Pierre found between large and small herds: labor costs. On the small farm it takes a half hour to produce 100 pounds of milk, and on the large farm it takes a quarter of an hour. At $10 per hour that translates to a savings of $2.50 per hundered.

Actually, in the study, the difference between cost of production on the small and large farms was $4 per hundred. If you just patch up these two things, capital and labor, you have done quite well.

St. Pierre's recommendation:

- Remove all heifers from the farm and have them raised on contract. This saves $600 in capital investment per heifer for the two years before she starts to give you a return on investment.
- Don't raise crops. You save capital investment in equipment, and you reduce the amount of land you need.
- Regroup your capital and put it into the cows. On the average, with one million dollars in capital investment, the smaller farm has 125 cows. That's only about $150,000 out of the one million invested in the cows. Since it is the cows that make the money, St. Pierre doesn't think it makes sense to have only 15 percent of your investment in what makes the money.
- Use the assets you save on land and equipment to increase the number of cows from 125 to 250.
- Reduce the four to five operators on the diversified farm to three operators on a concentrated dairy farm. On the smaller farms the average worker produces 400,000 pounds of milk, in larger herds the average worker produces 800,000 pounds.

With the reduction in capital and labor expenses, St. Pierre says you can reduce costs by 45 percent and you are now competive with the large herds and can have a family operation. He says different areas of the country and different farm operations will need to implement the plan in different ways, but he believes you need to start thinking along a different track. A corresponding herd of only 40 to 50 cows can still use the same principles.

"I am not satisfied to talk about survival of the dairy farmer," St. Pierre said. "That sounds like you are on a sinking boat and you hope you get to shore before you starve to death. I want to help get farmers to think in a direction that keeps the boat from sinking in the first place. If farmers will rethink their operations, I think there is a bright future, especially for the next generation."

Timothy Snyder, manager, dairy nutrition, Pennfield Corp., gave practical ways to reduce costs such as earlier weening of calves and raising heifers to calve at a younger age. But he cautioned that in feeding the dry cow, the cow in the transition period, and the post fresh period you should not try to cut corners.

"You need to meet the nutrient needs of the cow, no more than she needs, but certainly no less," Snyder said. "Instead of cutting fat, some farmers cut muscle. The strategies that returned 10 to one last year will do the same this year. Don't save a dollar and lose three. Save where you can; invest where you need to for that extra return."

Corwin Holtz, dairy consultant, Papillon Ag Products, Corp., gave points on cow comfort and cow health that covered such items as air and water quality, good footing and properly sized comfortable stalls, heat relief, foot care, vaccination programs, and dry cow treatment.

Pennfield Dairy Days continue in other areas of Pennsylvania and Maryland through mid-February.

HOW CAN A GROWER IMPROVE FEED CONVERSION?

R.M. Hulet
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

High corn prices, low production margins, and decreased production performances are forecast for 1996. One of the consequences of high corn prices is that alternative feed ingredients may have more variability in their analyzed nutrient values when used in diets of poultry.

In broiler and turkey units, more emphasis will be placed on cost-cutting management techniques by production personnel. The techniques can vary from decreased litter allocations and propane allotments to the use of lower cost/lower quality feed ingredients, all of which can affect performance. Often, other decisions are made to delay repairs and improvements to preserve cash flow. Since many of these decisions in the integrated company are made centrally, producers should not think that efforts at their level are not important or appreciated. On the other hand, many of the central decisions are going to affect the producer's ability to manage his birds.

For example, commercial producers should be aware that with high feed costs, energy values will tend to be lower than in the past. More and a greater percentage of alternative feed ingredients will be selected in an attempt to lower feed costs. Feed ingredients that substitute for corn and soybean meal have nutrient profiles that are less uniform, making the finished feed less uniform when delivered to the bird. Furthermore, decisions to reduce the amount of litter and propane used can affect the growth rate and feed conversion. Therefore, basic management factors that affect feed conversion and livability are more important than ever as poultry growers face increases in the costs of production.

Feed conversion, in a practical sense, is defined as the amount of feed consumed divided by the pounds of live bird delivered to the processing plant. From the grower's point of view, the major factors affecting feed conversion are: livability, temperature, ventilation rate, and feed management.

Livability is generally separated into the two periods of the production cycle: starting (0-7 days) and finishing (final week). These are the two greatest times of high mortality. While late mortality has the greater effect on feed costs, early mortality affects total pounds by reducing the potential of birds available to market. Greater emphasis needs to be placed on starting birds and assisting birds that have more difficulty learning how to drink and eat. Starting mortality is especially important in turkey production where each poult is worth an average of over one dollar per bird.

Two conditions that have great effect on overall broiler performance are flipovers and ascites. Attention to lighting programs or feeding programs that slow down growth between 6 and 15 days of age can be a valuable means of reducing these condition, depending on the strain of bird raised. Also during this period of increased costs and consequently reduced margins, producers must not neglect biosecurity as it is also important when preventing the entrance of disease into the poultry house.

Temperature and ventilation are interrelated in maintaining a good environment for growing birds. Maintaining corsistent temperature that meets the needs of the birds without using excess propane is desired. Changes may entail proper winterizing of the buildings, repair of ventilation equipment, and proper operation of that equipment based on interior and exterior temperatures. If house temperature is maintained at the birds' optimum, then less feed is "burned" to maintain body temperature. Proper fresh air movement is required to reduce and maintain ammonia levels at 25 ppm or less, remove excess moisture from the house, and remove dust. Ammonia is known to increase mortality and susceptibility to respiratory diseases, consequently decreasing the birds' growth rate and feed conversion. The art of balancing temperature and fresh air is the secret to optimizing growth and feed conversion in poultry house.

A major component of feed management is the prevention of feed waste. Gladys and Hulet (1995) reported at Poultry Science Meetings in Alberta, Canada the beneficial use of feeder lids when compared with paper under the automatic feeders on the performance of broilers in a paired trial. The results demonstrated a reduction in feed wastage with feeder lids, as well as greater growth rate and feed conversions. They also reported improved feed conversions and reduced fuel usage in broiler houses equipped with air inlets above the curtains compared with broilers raised in curtain ventilated houses during the winter.

In conclusion, higher feed costs will require growers to make every effort to improve flock feed conversion through the reduction of mortality, optimizing temperature, maintaining proper ventilation rates to reduce ammonia, and the reduction of feed wastage.

Conservation Benefits Future Generations, Says Chester Farmer Of Year

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GUTHRIESVILLE (Chester Co.) — Marilyn Umble spoke about the long-range benefits that conservation has granted her family on their 220-acre Glen Valley Dairy Farm in Atglen.

Conservation isn't just about saving soil. Said Umble, it's about seeing the return of wildlife and the natural beauty of a streambank after protective measures are taken.

Umble spoke to Lancaster Farming at last week's Penn State-sponsored Chester County Crops Day.

She said that the conservation work will benefit successive generations of the Umble family on the 175-head dairy farm.

The Umble family — including Ken and Marilyn and sons Brandon, 15; Jordan, 12; Scott, 8 and grandparents Harold and Lena — were honored as the Chester County Conservation Farmers of the Year.

Years ago, the herd on Glen Valley Farm was expanded, and new facilities, particularly for manure storage, were needed.

"When you increase cow size, you also have to increase your potential with all the nutrients that are going out in the ground and so forth," said Ken to those registered at the Crops Day.

In 1951, Harold Umble started the dairy with about 34 head of cows and heifers. Shortly thereafter, contour strips were implemented on the farm. Now, the dairy maintains about 175 head, with about 83 milking, on 150 tillable acres.

Harold Umble signed with the Chester County Conservation District in September of 1967. In all the years since, the Umbles have installed a variety of conservation practices, including a manure storage structure, 900 feet of grassed waterway, 32 acres of contour farming, 63 acres of contour strip cropping; and 58 acres in a planned grazing system.

Today, about 90 percent of the conservation plan is implemented, according to the district.

Ken said the first manure pit was installed in 1981 and enlarged about two years ago. They signed on with the Chesapeake Bay program in 1992.

For Ken, a big focus of the conservation work has been on the streambank fencing (about 3,400 feet installed so far) and three concrete stream crossings on the farm.

The greatest challenge in conservation farming for Umble is using no-till.

"We have done some no-till corn planting," he said. "I wish it would work a little bit better on our farm than it does, because we have a few rocks, a little shale, and no-till corn doesn't usually always work that well (in terms of corn emergence)."

Umble uses a rotation of alfalfa, five years corn, and one year of soybeans.

But for the family, the work has paid off in terms of a cleaner environment. Ken said that where once the streams were muddy and banks dirt-filled, "now they're a lot cleaner."

Marilyn said her son, Brandon, has noticed the return of wildlife and "enjoys that part of it."

Jim Hudson, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, presented a state pesticide update and reviewed worker protection standards to those registered at Crops Day.

Hudson pointed out that service containers are becoming more useful for storage of extra pesticides. He said that by law, the containers must be labeled, so he urged applicators to use a permanent marker to write what chemical is in the service containers used.

State rules on recordkeeping for pesticides indicated that dates of application and location of rented ground — the location of a particular field, if rented — must be recorded. Records must be kept on restricted use pesticides. But Hudson indicated that even if using non-restricted materials, "We suggest you do keep records, however, to allay the fears of those people who are moving in from the city."

The Umble family was honored as the Chester County Conservation Farmers of the Year. From left, Ken and Marilyn Umble receive the award from Bob Lange, chairman of the conservation district.

The EPA product registration number, amount of pesticide used, and dosage rate are important.

For worker protection standards, Hudson reminded applicators that employees fall under worker protection standard categories. It only applies to employees — not the employer or the employer's family members.

"We found out over the last year that it's mixers and handlers where we're finding the problems," he said. The number one problem is not furnishing the necessary personal protective equipment required by the label.

"The label will tell you what gloves must be used and that runs all the way from the little surgical gloves up to butyl rubber," said Hudson. "It's very specific on the label."

Hudson said that employers must provide the equipment and keep it in clean and workable condition.

Using the appropriate equipment is good for anyone.

"For you all who aren't involved in worker protection, read the label and use the equipment yourself. It makes a whole lot of sense."

Chester County Dairy Milk Lines

Walter Wurster Extension Dairy Agent

CHESTER COUNTY DHIA

Chester County dairy farmers met for their annual DHIA banquet at West Fallowfield Christian School on December 7, 1995. Over 125 attended and heard Chairman Dan Miller report on a successful year which included final merger with PA DHIA. The majority of funds remaining in the treasury at the time of merger are being held by the state organization to be used only for Chester County events, such as subsidizing the banquet and purchasing awards. The balance of the funds were given as bonuses to the technicians for their outstanding contribution to the program.

Dean Amick, PA DHIA, reported on updated reports and new technology, especially the MUN (Milk Urea Nitrogen) Test. Members elected to the advisory committee for a 3-year term were Dan Miller, Chatham; Ken Miller, Jr., Chester Springs; and Glenn Ranck, Cochranville.

Awards were presented to the following herds with a 1995 RHA for protein over 750 lbs.:

1. Dunwood Farm, 856 lbs.; 2. Melwood Farm, 840 lbs.; 3. Breck-A-De Farm, 807 lbs.; 4. Thunder Valley Farm, 784 lbs.; 5. Crystal-Ray Farm, 774 lbs.; 6. Marilyn & Duane Hershey, 763 lbs.

Plaques were given to the two herds with the lowest average Somatic Cell Count for 1995: 1. Ivan S. Stoltzfus, 120,000; 2. Charles & Debra Young, 171,000.

Certificates were presented to the herds with the highest Herd Management Scores in 1995. They were:

1. Breck-A-De Farm, 119 points; 2. Crystal-Ray Farm, 113 points, 3. Dunwood Farm, 111 points.

1996 DAIRY NUTRITION WORKSHOP

This excellent two-day workshop will be conducted at the Chester County Extension office on Thursdays, February 22 and 29, 1996, from 9:45 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. The cost will be $30 per farm. Meals will be on your own in the cafeteria.

The program combines satellite technology with locally-shown videos and small group exercises so that a farmer comes away from the sessions with an excellent background in dairy nutrition. The purpose of the program is to give farmers a better understanding of how nutrition principles are applied on their farm by their nutritionist or feed company.

On February 22, the workshop will focus on silage fermentation and the effect it can have on forage quality. Emphasis will be on how to prevent problems in various storage structures, including balage, and how to cope with problems that develop. The use of silage additives and ways to handle mycotoxins will be discussed. Participants are encouraged to bring a sample of their milking cow silage to the first workshop so they can be used in the various activities.

On February 29, the session will start out by examining certain factors related to concentrate feeding, such as type, particle size, and amounts and how they influence dairy cow nutrition. Producers will take information from their own operations to evaluate their feeding systems and control points that can be incorporated to maximize production and to keep cows healthy. Forage quality and intake also will be discussed.

For reservations and information, call Walter Wurster at 610-696-3500 no later than February 20.

New Tobacco Auction for Lancaster County

Farmer's Tobacco Warehouse

Kirkwood, PA
(location: Intersection Rt. 472 & Noble Rd., Kirkwood Hay Auction)

FARMERS,

I have a very Important question that I want you to answer for me. Have you ever heard of a PUBLIC AUCTION that has silent bids?

There is nothing that can hurt your tobacco prices more than an auction allowing a tobacco company to buy at an "under the table" price. If a tobacco buyer has a higher price, why don't they show it up front on sale? Why is it done at night or on the "off day"? Could it be that they are afraid that another company may push the prices higher if their bid was known? I believe so.

If farmers want a true auction, it is here! No private deals will be done. It has to be done up front so that all buyers will know the bids and can possibly push the market higher if they want tobacco. How could you buy a load of hay if you don't know the other farmer is bidding at the hay auction?

I have worked hard to get the price where it should be for my farmers. I need your support & a full house to get the job done. please fill Farmers Tobacco Warehouse full next week and give me an opportunity to work for you.

Eastern seaboard. He also finds time to keep in touch with local potato growers and stay abreast of happenings on the cultivation side of the chip industry.

Cited for his community-minded spirit, Potter supports many local and regional charitable events and causes. The Margaret Moul Home for Cerebral Palsy Patients has long been a recipient of the generosity of Potter and Martin's Chips, along with numerous youth organizations.

Potter is known internationally in the potato chip business and has shared both his expertise and technological developments with companies from Australia to the People's Republic of China.

In accepting his award, Potter commented on a recent visit he had made to a "fourth world" island country, with an average annual income of $1,100 and long lines of people waiting to buy food.

"They were standing in line because they would only buy food made in America," Ken Potter observed. "I'm very proud of the farmers in America that make us number one in the world in food."

Hosts for the annual farm visitation tour and participants in the annual Ag Day farm/business exchange were recognized during the program.

In addition to the Buser family, whose farm served as the headquarters for the annual pre-Thanksgiving tour, four other eastern York County enterprises were honored as hosts for the several hundred participants. They were Dawn and Glen Anderson, Jon and Leeanna Wiesman, Allen and Charmaine Winter and Modern Landfill.

For the Ag Day exchange, participating farmers and businesspersons are matched up to spend a day together at each other's businesses. Participants matched for the exchange last March included Bruce Smith, state legislator for the 92nd district and Richie Flinchbaugh, hog, fruit and grain producer; Tom Kauffman, Three-Mile-Island Nuclear Generating facility and Robert Wantz, butcher; Mike Waugh, state legislator for the 93rd district and Dave Miller, Miller's Plant Farm; Stan Saylor, state legislator for the 94th district and hog producer Mike Jasienski; and Les Brant, Mellon Bank and John Hope Anderson, Jr., fruit grower.

Speaker for the evening, Congressman William Emerson of Missouri, was unable to participate due to ongoing budget debates in Congress.

well as the southeast region of Pennsylvania.

"Mr. Myers has also provided leadership and was an instructor in the (Penn State Extension) Southeast Pasture Planning schools.

"During his tenure as a county agent, he has been actively involved in numerous "on-farm" demonstrations which serves as a focal point for farm tours and educational field days in his county."

Myers has also developed a program to monitor and measure pastures for those entering into the practice of integrating heavier use of the grazing forages into their year-round livestock feeding program (otherwise known as grazing).

Also receiving recognition was Robert Hetrick, of Blair County. Retired from the county extension office since 1990, he was recognized for his years of service in supporting and teaching soil and water conservation.

"During his tenure with the extension service, Robert was always a strong supporter and teacher of soil and water conservation," according to a PFGC statement. "He coordinated numerous conservation programs in Blair County in cooperation with Penn State University and the Soil and Water Conservation Service (sic)(formerly the USDA SCS, now the USDA Natural Resource Conservation Service).

According to the PFGC, Hetrick was active in the PFGC Alfalfa Growers Program and stressed the use of forages in practices to reduce soil erosion and water conservation.

He also worked closely with the county's farmland preservation board and its Clover Creek Watershed Project.

Also recognized were 1995 hay show winners.

Y Brook Farm of Belleville was recognized for having the top entry of partially dried hay with a preservative. On a percent-dry matter basis, the entry tested at 20.0 percent crude protein, 29.6 percent acid detergent fiber, 41 percent neutral detergent fiber, and was rated 149 for relative feed value.

Robert Bieber, for the fifth year in a row, won with his heat dried entry with a test of 20.5 percent crude protein, 25.3 percent acid detergent fiber, 35.6 percent neutral detergent fiber, and a 181 for relative feed value.

John Valkovec, of Bath, was the winner of the field-cured later cutting entries with 21.5 percent crude protein, 29.3 percent acid detergent fiber, 43.9 percent neutral detergent fiber, and a relative feed value of 140.

Positives Outweigh Negatives For Agricultural Economy Direction

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — The positives outweight the negatives as far as existing conditions for the outlook of the agricultural economy.

That was the message of H. Louis Moore, Penn State University professor of agricultural economics, during his keynote address at the Wednesday agricultural seminar sponsored by Lebanon Valley National Bank for its agricultural lending customers, at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

Moore is a perennial speaker at the spring educational forum where LVNB provides its customers a slate of speakers to address timely topics of concern.

In his talk, Moore said that the list of positive aspects in the economic environment includes the rate of inflation at a low 2.6 percent; unemployment at a low 5.6 percent (compared to 23 percent in Spain, 9 percent in Germany and from 30- to 40-percent or more in other nations in Eastern Europe); food prices and supplies are all positive for the consumer (food supplies good, prices low); thanks to the maneuvering of federal reserve chairman Alan Greenspan the economy had the "soft landing" desired; and competitiveness and exports are "booming."

According to the professor, the negative aspects are mostly related to human misbehavior.

"The antics of Congress and the president are all negative," Moore said about the obviously personal-politic motivated acts and grandstanding being done, such as allowing the government to close twice. "It shows how fragile government is," he said.

Also on Moore's list of negatives is the fact that retail sales and consumer credit are directly linked and consumers appear to be slowing done on buying, as credit limits are being reached.

"We do have a recession coming," Moore said, "but when?"

He said it probably will come after the presidential election, unless something or somebody else does something to hasten it.

Some problems with the heralded trade agreements are surfacing and some producers are grousing about inequities not addressed, such as Mexico's not providing usable pre-harvest crop reporting — Florida tomato growers have recently complained about the onslaught of Mexican tomatoes reducing prices to the point that Floridians harvest at a loss.

"But overall," Moore said, "the positives do outweigh the negatives."

Moore covered a variety of different social and economic trends and provided some data to support an outlook that generally was optimistic for agriculture and the United States.

He said that despite the attempts of some to persuade consumers to decry the benefits of agriculture and meat consumption, per capita meat consumption has been increasing and despite the public clamor for low-fat and fat-free products, per capita fat consumption has risen significantly.

Using a bar chart showing the relative amounts of per capita consumption by type of fat, Moore illustrated that while per capita consumption fat from red meats has decreased over the past decade, the consumption of vegetable fats and butter has increased to the point that the total amount of dietary fat consumption has increased.

According to Moore, per capita meat consumption was about 200 pounds per person per year in 1990; it was estimated at about 216 pounds or more. The most increase in meat consumption has been with poultry, and that is worldwide, he said. The United States produces about 33 percent of the world's poultry and demand is increasing. Moore said China and many countries are increasing demand for poultry.

Further, he said that in areas such as in some of the nations of the former Soviet Union, the demand is for the dark meat of poultry, which is actually not much in demand domestically, and there are large markets for other parts of poultry that enjoy limited domestic demand.

(As an aside illustrating the increasing use of poultry, according to published report this week, Campbell's Soup is increasing the amount of chicken in its soup offering.)

He said that the trend of the past 20 years — for the demand for beef to decline slightly, pork to remain stable and poultry to increase — should continue, if not increase.

Last year United State agricultural exports were estimated at $53 billion, though a late fourth quarter surge will probably correct that figure higher to $54 billion or more, Moore said.

He predicted that agricultural exports should grow by at least $1.5 billion this year.

The world population is continuing to boom, mostly in underdeveloped countries, and the demand for meats and grains should increase.

Moore said that in 1950, there were two "cities" with populations of more than 10 million people — the New York metropolis and London.

In 1994, there were 14 cities with populations of more than 10 million people and only four were in industrially developed nations.

It is projected that by 2015, there will be 27 cities with populations greater of 10 million, five in the developed nations. The population in those 27 cities will equal about half the world population in 1950.

Land values and farmland values are increasing, by about 6.4 percent in 1994, with a project increase of 5 to 8 percent for 1996, Moore said. He said he interpreted the increase in value to demonstrate the increasing awareness of the production value of farmland and its tighter supplies.

He said he sees more freedom in the marketplace and less government.

While the percentage of retail food price returned to the farmer has decreased from 22 percent in 1993, to 21 percent today, Moore cautioned that he did not see that statistic as a useful measure of farming profit, but rather a reflection of the amount of "value-added" processing and the wider variety of use of farm commodities.

He said that while grains, such as corn, are in strong demand and tight supply, production has been steadily increasing for the past 65 years and he said he expects no change.

However, he did say that demand should increase and that supplies of corn should continue to tighten. He said there is not enough carryover to keep prices stable. In order to have some national carryover of corn, he said the industry needs to reduce its use.

As far as conditions for grains for 1996, he said corn carryover is expected to be 7.4 percent of what is used; there should be no drop in feed use of corn during the first quarter despite its $3.50 per bushel price; an 18-percent reduction in feed use would create carryover; the increasing cost per bushel may reduce demand somewhat; there is no Farm Bill to guide planting and acreage should be up; but the seed for the best corn varieties are almost gone as planting is expected to be about 18 percent above 1995.

For livestock producers, he said to expect to see low prices for a few years, but for that to change in about three to four years.

Overall, Moore said he sees a strong national economy, though not explosive, grain production and prices to rise, livestock production to rise and prices to fall, and exporting to help all segments.

He said the nation's agricultural trade balance is surplus and of the imports we get, most are commodities that can't be grown well here. Moore said the United States would be in great shape, "If the rest of the economy was as strong as agriculture."

It's ten o'clock. Do you know where your dog is?

At least one we know of sometimes arrives at our back door about that hour, seeking out creature comforts. The creature seeking comfort is "Chessie," The Farmer II's furry, white, 100 pound Great Pyrenees. Chess spent several months here last summer, until our son moved across the meadow to a house on an adjoining farm.

Pyrenees, as we understand, were bred and developed as guardians of sheep. While Chess has no flocks to keep secure, the instinct for protectiveness runs strong in her blood. And her deep, vocal bark is intimidating enough to what she considers predators—anyone not immediately familiar to her. She thinks we're her herd, so she protects us against predators.

"Every dog needs a den," chuckled our son when she first began laying claim to the bathroom on the first floor. Then she switched allegiance to a space upstairs bedroom, its twin bed made extra cushy with the added layer of an egg-crate mattress donated by my mom. After battling muddy paw marks on the bedspread for a couple of weeks, I finally figured out it was just easier to give Chess her own bedspread, a sturdy old one originally destined to become shop rags.

One recent late night, a loud scratch on the front stormdoor signaled our four-footed visitor who had abandoned her own home to spend the night at "Grandma's." She paraded by The Farmer for a welcoming petting, then waited at the upstairs door to be put to bed.

Guard dog or not, Chess comes here knowing certain creature comforts await. Like her own bed. The finicky housecat's food which she inhales with her big muzzle and the barncats' morning milk which she guzzles up in a couple of laps. Plus the supply of dogfood kept in the basement for Solomon.

Now there's another four-footed, creature-comfort seeker. Solomon dislikes the cold. And the rain. Heat. Humidity. Thunderstorms. Any kind of weather excess, unless, of course, you're taking him for a walk; then his grin and wagging tail attest that no weather is too bad to be out in.

Mostly, Solomon much prefers the toasty, dry environment of the basement couch. Next to the woodstove. Which is also the coolest place in the house, during summer. It's a dog's life, but he manages.

When it comes to creature-comfort seeking, Monk the housecat is CEO (Cat Everyone Obeys) of our pet population. The dogs outweigh her—but she out-bosses them. Monk's our indoor thermometer of sorts—sprawled across the floor at an open door in very hot weather, curled up into an increasingly tighter ball as the temperature drops.

Move from your seat for an instant and she'll be there, claiming the warm spot you left and protesting when you take it back. She also claims my favorite blanket in shaggy, black and white cow design, into which her black and white coloration blends like perfect camoflauge.

But she's outdone herself—creature comfort wise—this winter. Monk has discovered the steady warmth which flows up through the floor heat vents and sprawls her wide-body shape flat out across them. Which effectively prevents anything from heating except her. Her favorite is the one in the kitchen, though she does sometimes relocate to one in the living room. Maybe just for a change of scenery.

Over the milennia, the species that have thrived are those that adapted to their environments. Pests around here generally enjoy considerable longevity because they've adapted to the environment.

Ours.

State And National Honey Queens Spread News

Jona Hoover Reigns As Queen Bee Nationwide

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — For the first time ever, the American Honey Queen is a Pennsylvania resident. Jona Hoover, after reigning a year as the Pennsylvania Honey Queen, competed for the national title at the American Beekeeping Federation's annual convention held in Portland, Oregon from January 16-22.

The exuberant queen was selected after one week of judging, which included a sales presentation, essay preliminary, resume, "a quiz bowl" on her honey and beekeeping knowledge, and interviews and observations by judges throughout the week's events.

Jona will spend a week in Colorado for training before embarking on what Jona says is more "like a full-time marketing position than the queen aura and thing of parades."

Her coast to coast honey and beekeeping promotions will require as much as a three-week stay in Florida and a week in Alaska. Honey, she said, comes in more than 300 flavors and she enjoys trying exotic ones such as fireweed honey from Alaska.

"Bees aren't just about making honey. They are 10 times more valuable for pollination. It's estimated that every third bite of food one eats is the result of pollination," she said.

"There's not a beekeeper that doesn't want to talk about his secret or technique. Different areas do things differently. Some areas have to deal with bears stealing honey so the hives are placed on platforms to discourage bears from extracting the honey," said Jona, who is intrigued with the many different aspects of beekeeping.

There is a honey shortage in the U.S., according to Jona, so honey is imported from other countries such as Argentina and Canada. Countries such as China sometimes water down the honey and do not have the quality controls required in the states. Consequently the American Beekeeping Federation lobbied to have anti-dumping laws enacted.

A freshman at Millersville University, Jona put her public relations training to work in preparing a commercial for electronic media, which she presented during pageant festivities.

With the catchy slogan "All Day, Every Day — Honey," Jona

Crowned American Honey Queen, Jona Hoover is the first Pennsylvanian to represent the American Beekeeping Federation by crisscrossing the U.S. to tell others about the importance of bees in pollination and about the virtues of using honey every day.

It's A Honey Of A Job For Emily Anderson

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

RED LION (York Co.) — Eighteen-year-old Emily Anderson had an induction as the real queen bee long before she was crowned Pennsylvania Honey Queen last month.

The induction happened after she was called to remove a swarm of bees from a local yard.

"I had read a lot about removing bees, but it was my first experience," Emily said. "It was under the worst possible conditions. It was raining, which always puts bees in a bad mood."

According to written instructions, the pair dutifully dressed in protective gear and Emily soaked the bee swarm with a heavy sugar water solution. She placed a hive body underneath the swarm. Using a tree branch, Emily's dad hit the top of the swarm. The bees were supposed to fall directly into the hive body beneath it. Instead the bees swarmed on Emily and her dad.

"I went beserk. I was black with bees," Emily said.

She ran screaming from the scene. But her dad yelled that she must help him finish the job.

Emily returned to the scene and saw her dad was also covered with clumps of bees.

Because the scent of the queen been was on Emily, the bees swarmed her and were not about to depart.

As best the pair could do, they knocked the bees into the hive, loaded it into their vehicle and drove (still covered with bees) to her grandparents farm to set up the hive.

"My dad asked me if the bees were only on top of his mask or if they had crept underneath."

Emily said that she saw clumps of bees had found an opening and were on her dad's neck.

"Dad was driving so I didn't want him to know the truth. I lied, 'No, dad, the bees are only on the outside.'"

After the father and daughter team set up the hive, they brushed the bees off each other.

Despite the protective gear, Emily ended up with 12 bee stings and her dad with many more.

Despite heavy swelling, Emily pulled the stingers out and she and her dad hopped back in the car and went straight to Lancaster to buy more bee keeping supplies.

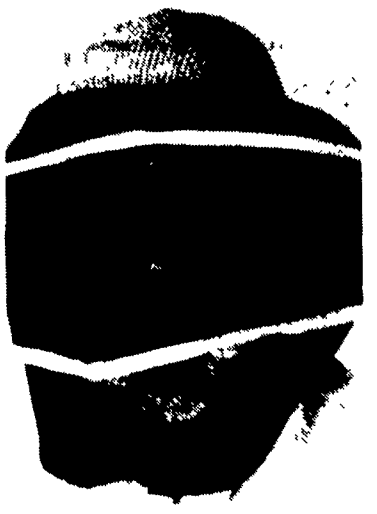
"Twelve bee stings are no big deal," Emily said of the episode.

Emily's feisty dedication to the bee industry had its beginnings when she was in third grade and read a story about honey bees and keepers.

Excited, she begged her parents

(Turn to Page B9)

Emily Anderson is the new Pennsylvania Honey Queen. The 18-year-old from York County is studying animal science at the University of Maryland.



Emily Anderson dressed in her beekeeping gear to have her senior picture taken. According to Emily, she doesn't need to worry about bee stings if the netting is tied properly.

As the honey queen chairperson, Becky Fisher Gerhart, right, reviews Emily's schedule. Those who would like to book the honey queen for appearances or want to know more information about the program should contact Becky at 66 S. Manor St., Mountville, PA 17554.

Whole Grains Cut Food Costs And Fat Too

Savory cooks are becoming more choosy about the foods they prepare. They're opting for more functional foods that are healthful for what they inherently have in them and not for what has been removed or added.

Grains, legumes, fresh fruits and vegetables are all functional foods that make smart dining choices. According to the USDA, people should be eating from 6 to 11 servings of grains daily. The problem is that many people are not familiar with cooking whole grains and shy away from using them. It really isn't difficult to find easy ways to incorporate whole grains in your daily diet.

Today's recipes will focus on barley, brown rice, bulgur, and buckwheat.

• Barley is a wholesome grain that makes a healthful contribution to many dishes, adding flavor and volume without a lot of unwanted extras such as fat, cholesterol and calories. Pearl barley, which is often used in recipes, consists of a kernel that is enclosed in a tough hull. When the barley kernel is pearled, the hull is removed and the kernel is polished. Regular pearl barley requires about 45 minutes cooking time. Quick-cooking barley has been steamed and dried prior to packaging and requires only 10 to 12 minutes cooking time.

Pearl barley may be cooked on top of the stove or in the microwave. Bring 1 cup regular pearl barley and 3 cups water or other liquid to a boil. Reduce heat to low, cover and cook 45 minutes or until barley is tender and liquid is absorbed. Makes about 3½ cups.

Barley is also available in other forms. Barley flour, flakes and grits are available in some supermarkets and health food stores.

• Brown rice is the whole grain rice that retains a natural coating of bran. The light tan rice has a nutty flavor and chewy texture plus a lot of fiber. It is available in short, medium, and long grained. Brown rice requires more cooking time than white rice because the bran layer acts as a barrier to heat and moisture.

• Bulgur is whole wheat that's been steamed, dried, and crushed.

• Buckwheat is meal ground from buckwheat, which is especially tasty in pancakes or waffles.

COUNTRY BREAKFAST CEREAL

1 cup uncooked brown rice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup seedless raisins
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2¼ cups water

Combine rice, salt, butter, raisins, and cinnamon with water in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil; stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 45 to 55 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork. Serve with milk or cream, honey or brown sugar, and fresh fruit, if desired. 6 servings.

BULGUR PILAF

2 tablespoons cooking oil
1 cup bulgur, uncooked
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup slivered red peppers
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup water
1 teaspoon thyme leaves
¼ cup toasted slivered almonds
5-ounce can chunk white chicken meat (optional)

Heat oil in skillet. Add onions, bulgur, and peppers and lightly saute. Stir frequently and cook until onions are tender and translucent.

Add liquid and thyme leaves; bring to a boil. Cover tightly, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes. Remove from heat, stir in chicken, if desired, and let stand covered 5 minutes.

Stir in almonds and serve immediately.

PEACH CRISP

2 cups cooked brown rice
1¼ cups fresh peach chunks
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar, divided
¾ cup whole wheat flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ cup butter
½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Combine rice, peaches, and ⅓ cup sugar in buttered shallow 1½ -quart baking dish. Mix flour, remaining ⅓ cup sugar, cinnamon, and nutmeg. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle over rice. Sprinkle nuts over flour mixture. Bake at 350 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. Serve warm with whipped cream or ice cream if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Whole grains are making a comeback, since recent research shows the healthful benefits of eating them and the USDA's recommendations encourage individuals to eat 6-11 servings of grains daily. Country Breakfast Cereal, made with brown rice and whole wheat, is a great way to begin your day.

BARLEY MOROCCO

4 cups hot cooked pearl barley
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup sliced onions
½ cup sliced celery
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 carrots, sliced
1 medium zucchini, sliced
1 medium green pepper, seeded and cut into squares
1 cup broccoli florets
15½-ounce can garbanzo beans, drained
2 cups vegetable broth
2 teaspoons soy sauce
2 teaspoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon ground coriander
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons cornstarch, dissolved in 3 tablespoons water
Chopped cilantro, for garnish

Cook barley. Heat oil in large heavy saucepan over medium heat. Add onions, celery, and garlic. Saute 3 to 4 minutes. Add remaining ingredients except cornstarch mixture and garnish. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in cornstarch mixture and cook, stirring, until thickened. Spoon barley around the edge of a deep platter. Pour vegetables into center. Garnish, if desired, and serve. Makes 6 servings.

For the first time ever, Pennsylvania is the home of the American Honey Queen. Crowned last week in Portland, Oregon, Jona Hoover will travel across the U.S. as the spokesperson for the honey and beekeeping industry.

Jona, who is from Holtwood, has completed a year as the Pennsylvania Honey Queen. Emily Anderson of York County succeeds her. Articles about both of these young women appear in this section of Lancaster Farming today.

A brochure with Jona's favorite recipes using honey is available. She believes recipes should be simple and delicious for today's busy cooks. For a copy of the recipe brochure, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Becky Fisher Gerhart, Honey Queen Chairperson, 66 S. Manor St., Mountville, PA 17554.

Here are two recipes from Jona's brochure.

ROYAL PALACE BREAD

10 slices white bread, crust removed
1 pound honey

Soak bread in honey at least 30 minutes. Place in baking dish, piling the slices evenly. Bake in 300 degree oven for 25 minutes. Cool, then chill. Serve with cream poured over top. If desired, shredded coconut may be sprinkled on top.

HONEY CUSTARD

3 eggs, beaten
¼ teaspoon salt
Nutmeg
¼ cup honey
2 cups milk

Combine eggs, honey, and salt. Scald milk and stir slowly into egg mixture. Pour into custard cups. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Set cups in pan of hot water. Bake in 325 degree oven for 30 minutes or until knife inserted into mixture comes out clean.

As part of the pageant requirements, Jona presents her idea for a commercial.

R. Scott and Sandy Hoover were not able to attend the national pageant to watch their daughter Jona being crowned, but they were at the state pageant.

slants her message toward middle-age listeners who grew up using honey on their biscuits only on Sunday. "Now you're older and wiser, you need to be an example, so use honey for breakfast, for Timmy's cough, and in cooking by getting honey off the shelf and into your life all day, every day — honey."

Jona is negotiating to have her college scholarship retained so that she can devote this year to her American Honey Queen duties. At presstime, Jona continued to juggle studies with promotions.

The daughter of R. Scott and Sandra Hoover, Jona's siblings include Jarred, 18; Judah, 16; Jason, 15; Jozlyn, 12, and Josiah, 9.

tions work groups. On Wednesday, an ADADC Business Meeting will begin at 10:00 a.m. The agenda will include financial, advertising and program updates.

The pageant highlights two days of judging for the contestants. Based on a personal interview, adult speeches, elementary school presentation and informal interaction with others, the judges will be looking for the young women who most effectively promote milk and dairy products. Though only a state princess and two alternates will be selected as state representatives for the dairy industry, promotion is a team effort and all county dairy princesses are important in increasing milk and dairy product consumption.

In addition to the three state representatives who will receive $1200, $700 and $600 respectively, the three top speech presentation winners will receive $150 and the three best scrapbook winners will receive $75. "Miss Congeniality" will be selected from the contestants and recognized as the dairy princess who demonstrates the most friendliness and cooperative spirit of competition.

Two college students will receive the ADADC Memorial Scholarship and Leo Briggs Memorial Scholarship. Both scholarships are based on grade point average, extracurricular activities, future plans, and a 400-word essay discussing the applicant's commitment to a career in the dairy industry.

The Robert S. Turner Promoter of the Year Award will be presented to the county that has done an outstanding job promoting milk and dairy products. Selection is based on the number and types of promotional activities conducted by the 1994-95 county dairy princesses and their courts.

Finally, two Golden Cow Awards will be presented to adult county dairy promotion committee members. They will be recognized for outstanding service and dedication to local dairy promotion in New York State.

Banquet tickets are $15 per person and must be reserved by Monday, February 12. Complete the reservation form:

The Sheraton Inn, Liverpool, NY, is located directly across from exit 37 off the New York State Thruway. From Route 81 North or South, take exit 25-Seventh North Street. Go to the end of the ramp and take a right. The hotel will be straight ahead at the "T" (one mile).

to get some hives.

They didn't share her enthusiasm, but Emily didn't give up. She took a beekeeping course offered locally and kept reading about bees.

When Emily turned 16, her parents, Stephen and Brenda Anderson, relented and set up two hives on the family's one-acre back yard in Red Lion.

"Beekeeping is more work than I expected," Emily said.

"After constructing and painting the hive piece by piece, the Andersons put the bees in the hives late at night, which discourages bees from leaving the new hive.

All summer long, Emily fed the bees a mixture of sugar water to supplement the bees feeding. After the first year, the bees generally are strong enough to weather the winter weather, but they need all the honey they produce. It takes two summers before excess honey and wax can be collected from the hives. The upcoming summer will be the first time that Emily will be able to retract honey from her hives.

A persistent problem facing beekeepers is the highly transmittable mite problem called tracheal varroa.

Little can be done to eradicate the problem, since strong insect spays are unlawful because of government regulation. Emily, like other beekeepers, places apistand strips for antibiotic maintenance in the hive. She also uses what she calls grease patties (a government approved mixture of shortening and Terramycin) spread like a pattie on top of the hive.

Last year, she lost a large hive to the disease, but her treatment methods are beneficial because a recent visit by a licensed bee inspector showed that her six bee hives are healthy.

Mites are more prevalent in what Emily calls wild bee hives. These are hives that appear hovering in the air. Homeowners call beekeepers to remove them. Emily's name appears first on the list because it is alphabetized, which results in her receiving a large share of calls.

"But I can't remove bees from an attic and neither to I remove yellow jackets," Emily said of several requests for her services.

As the state honey queen, Emily drives to promotional events throughout the state. Fortunately, most of the events are scheduled in the summer and fall because Emily is a first-year student at the University of Maryland.

She is studying animal science and is a member of the Environmental Scholar's Program, which includes a scholarship and housing with other members of the program.

"The scholar's program is an excellent transition from high school to college," Emily said. She is a graduate of Dallastown Area High School where she was National Honor Society member, class vice president, and member of the soccer team, student council, track, and Future Leaders of York.

Emily is a member of both the York County Beekeepers Association and the state association.

Since that first episode with collecting swarms of bees from local farms, the Andersons' technique has greatly improved.

"Since that first experience, we never try to remove the bees on a rainy day. We wait for conditions to be right — a hot, summer day," Emily said.

The second time was a breeze according to Emily who videotaped the event with the help of the homeowner. In the second epidsode, the Andersons smoothly removed two hugh hives with nary a sting.

Recently Emily's grandfather brought 42 beehives at a local action. Emily is helping torch the inside of each hive to remove any lingering diseases.

Fortunately little is required in the upkeep of the beehives during Emily's college months. She is eager to promote honey and the beekeeping industry throughout the state and to be able to care for her own hives during the spring and summer months.

After a year of promotion throughout the state, Emily is eligible to compete for the national title of American Honey Queen to be held in January 1997.

After a year's reign as the state honey queen, Jona Hoover, right, crowned Emily Anderson as the Pennsylvania Honey Queeen. Jona then left for national competition in Portland, Oregon, where she was crowned American Honey Queen.

It took many years, but Emily finally convinced her parents, Stephen and Brenda Anderson, to raise honey bees. Watching their daughter be crowned the Pennsylvania Honey Queen is much easier than moving stray swarms of bees.

Emilie Miller Is Polled Hereford Princess

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Her friends call Emilie Miller "The Cow Princess."

"Actually, I'm not. I'm the Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Princess," says the 10 year old.

"What's a Polled Hereford?" is a constant question that people ask Emilie when first hearing about her title.

"They are beef cattle that are naturally hornless," Emilie explains.

This precocious 10-year-old sounds much older as she calmly and fluently talks about raising nine of her own Polled Herefords on her parents' farm in Womelsdorf. With her parents, Mike and state Rep. Sheila Miller, Emilie lives on a 63-acre farm. The family rents two additional farms to raise feed for their 25 Polled Hereford cows.

"My parents gave me my first calf on my first birthday, and I've been raising Polled Herefords ever since," she said.

Although Emilie doesn't recall that first present as a one-year-old, she certainly remembers subsequent ones.

"During my first year in 4-H, my project steer was a purebred Polled Hereford steer that I bred and raised. His name was Key Largo, he was out of my cow, Key to My Heart, which I bought from Keith and Linda Rooker at the Beef Expo sale in 1991.

"My second-year 4-H project steer was a half brother to my first one — Key West. His sire was a Salunga Ascendant."

Before going to school each morning, Emilie hurries to the barn to let the cows out of the stalls after her dad feeds them.

Recently the Millers purchased a Border Collie named Bonnie that they are training to herd the cattle.

Emilie is a third-year member of the Berks County 4-H Beef Club, where she placed first in junior book records last year and the year before that was named champion junior fitter. She owns nine registered Polled Hereford cattle that she shows at local, state, and national events.

In addition to showing at numerous county and adjoining county shows, Emilie travels to state and national shows. Last year for the first time, Emilie exhibited a steer and heifer at the Pennsylvania Junior Polled Hereford Association Preview Show in Dayton. She went to the Junior National in Louisville, Ky. and exhibited a heifer Bonita, purchased from Stockdale Hereford Farm.

She also exhibited Bonita, along with her steer Key West at the Pa. Beef Expo in March 1995. In November, Emilie showed Bonita at Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Of the nine Polled Herefords that Emilie owns, five are due to calf.

Emilie said that her friends are happy for her. She was surprised one day at school to be the center of attention. It was the day that each member of her class brought a newspaper clipping to share current events. A boy in her class had clipped an article of Emilie being selected as princess.

"I've always wanted to be a princess because I'd like to influence others to become involved in the Polled Hereford business," said Emilie.

She's proud that during her involvement in the 4-H Beef Club, she has influenced three of the members to purchase Polled Hereford cattle.

"Polled Herefords have a very nice disposition and they give a first time showman a good experience," Emilie said in support of the breed.

For the next two years, Emilie will assist Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Queen Elizabeth Dye of Amity in representing the beef cattle breed at national, state, and local events.

"In order to promote Polled Hereford cattle, I would like to go to many events that are not just for Polled Hereford raisers. Many people probably haven't heard of Polled Herefords, but with me as princess, they will," she promises.

Emilie finds it exciting to wear the tiara. Unfortunately, she did not have the opportunity to wear the crown at her coronation because the blizzard prevented the Hereford banquet from being held during Farm Show week.

Emilie was selected as princess based on her beef and community activities. She also submitted an essay on why she would like to be the state princess.

At Tulpehocken Elementary School, Emilie is in the enrichment program for gifted students.

"I especially enjoy math and art," she said.

She is a Girl Scout member and has been taking gymnastic lessons for seven years.

Although she is quite young to decide on a definite career, Emilie said, "I'd like be a farmer and raise Polled Herefords and either be a fashion designer or home interior designer. I like drawing and putting things together."

Polled Hereford Dairy Princess Emilie Miller with her Hereford Princess says, "Polled Herefords have a very nice disposition and they give a first-time showman a good experience."

For the next two years, Emilie Miller as the Polled Hereford Princess will assist Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Queen Elizabeth Dye of Amity in representing the beef cattle breed at national, state, and local events.

FEBRUARY

The shortest month of the calendar, February usually has 28 days. It has one extra day every leap year. February had 30 days until Julius Caesar took one and added it to July, the month named after him. The Roman emperor Agustus then took another day and added it to the month named after him, August. People in most Western countries celebrate Valentine's Day. Some celebrate Ground Hog Day. As superstition has it, if the ground hog sees his shadow, winter still isn't over!

Finish the puzzle to find out some fascinating February facts!

Dairy Princesses Name 'Big Cheeses'

SYRACUSE, N.Y.—In honor of the quality and variety of New York State cheese, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) sponsored a "Big Cheese" contest through local dairy promotion programs late last fall. Dairy princesses searched for people who have made a positive difference in their communities to recognize as a "Big Cheese." Winners ranged from 4-H program assistants to a retired fair board president, a director of a retirement home, and a world renown trombonist.

The contest generated both pre and post newspaper and radio publicity in all participating counties. In addition to announcing the contest, pre-publicity placements featured recipes using the 1995 Gold Medal cheese, awarded by the New York State Cheese Manufacturer's Association at the New York State Fair.

Winners received a prize-winning New York State cheese basket, including part of the "Big Cheese," a 150-pound block of Cheddar. Purchased at the New York State Fair Cheese Auction for a record $1,275 by Ag Radio Network, Rome, NY the cheese was donated to the New York State Dairy Princess Program.

According to David Bandler, Professor of Food Science at Cornell University, "New York's unique climate and soil conditions result in an adundant, high quality milk supply which in turn produces some of the world's best cheeses."

New York State Dairy Princess Jonelle Smith nominated and awarded Spiegle Wilcox the "Big Cheese of Cortland County." This world renown trombonist played with the Jean Goldkette Orchestra during the 1920s, performed various times on New York City's Carnegie Hall, appeared on the Tonight Show with Johnny Carson and most recently was honored by the Smithsonian Institution as part of the Jazz Oral Program. This 92-year-old Big Cheese is also an avid milk drinker. Here, Spelgle and Jonelle make a toast to their favorite drink.

Jefferson County Dairy Princess Melissa Bach, left, and Dairy Ambassador Melvin Phelps, right, congratulate Alex Duffy, center, as the Big Cheese of Jefferson County. The search was conducted by the county dairy princess to promote the quality of variety of New York State cheese. The retired board president of the Jefferson County Fair was one of several Big Cheeses selected across the state.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative recently awarded a plaque to the Les and Carol Landis Farm, which is actually a partnership of three brothers. Their dad, John L. Landis, purchased the farm in 1945. The brothers took over the operation in 1982. At left are Judy and Dale with sons Kevin, 13, and Corey, 16. At right is Carol and Les with son Wes. Charlie stands in the middle.

Landis Family Is ADC Award Recipient

Making A Living But Not A Killing

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Sprawled across 200 acres between Strasburg and Quarryville is the J. Leslie Landis Farm, where three families happily report that they are "making a living but not a killing."

"We all like what we're doing and we all get along," said J. Leslie, the eldest of the three brothers who are in partnership. "At least, if you don't like what you're doing, you never told me before," he said in an aside to his siblings during this interview.

As Les and his brothers Dale and Charlie discussed their division of duties on the farm, they often expressed gratitude toward their dad for making farming a reality for them.

In 1945, their dad, John L. Landis, purchased the land where he and his wife raised four boys and two girls. According to the Landis family, the farm was in poor shape when their dad first purchased it. He put in terraces and began strip farming, earning a soil conservation award.

A 10,000 chicken operation was phased out in the 1950s, and the dairy was expanded. In those beginning years, milk was stored in cans. The first milk from the farm was shipped to either Interstate or Queen Top Dairy.

"We aren't certain of the progression because none of us have been around that long," Dale said.

Eventually Atlantic Dairy Cooperative bought out the former milk company and ADC recently honored the Landis family for its 50-year record of shipping milk.

The three brothers took over the milking operation in 1982. Their dad and mother passed away within the past two years.

Leslie, or Les as he is mostly called, and his wife Carol live on the homeplace. Dale, his wife Judy, and two sons live on an adjoining farm, and brother Charlie lives in the home his parents built for retirement on the farm.

Over the years, numerous buildings have been erected to benefit the farming operation.

But, the real benefit to the partnership farming is that it is a debt-free operation, which is made possible for several reasons. One reason is that Les and his son are the only ones employed full time on the farm. Dale and Charlie share an off-the-farm job. They alternate every other week in driving a logging truck for J & L Logging Trucks.

Twenty-four-year-old Wes manages the herd, and raises Dalmatians and tobacco for some extra cash.

The three brothers consider themselves Jacks-of-all-trades, and are able to keep farm expenses down by doing the building, maintenance, equipment repair, feed grinding, and artificial insemination that is needed.

Among themselves the brothers do all mechanical work and building. Feed costs are kept down because they use a hammer mill to do their own grinding.

"We work for quality forage and take for forage analysis," Dale said.

Five years ago, the Landises switched to computer feeding and are well pleased with it. Les takes care of programming the computer to correspond with each cow.

In 1990 the brothers installed a milking parlor, which they recently paid off making their farm completely debt free.

The brothers have a loosely-divided system for work division. Leslie is in charge of crop management, spraying, and seeding. He's the one who attends meetings and updates certification. He helps milk and, like the others, has every other weekend off.

Dale helps with the milking and field work, feeds the cows, and is considered the main mechanic.

When Dale is driving truck, Charlie does basically the same duties as Dale and the calf feeding.

Since graduating from Solanco High School and the FFA program, Les's son Wes does all the artificial insemination work with the cows.

"Five years ago, I started using all top sires for type and milk and it's showing a big improvement now," Wes said. He works hard to keep the somatic cell count down.

"We are not DHIA members because we do our own computer monitoring, own milk weights, and computer feeding," Wes said.

Wes also raises Dalmatians and has three acres of tobacco with a

Every one has a say in decision making and in the division of labor. buddy.

Dale's and Judy's son Kevin, who is 13, helps in the summertime with field work and wherever he is needed.

The Landises keep all the ground in cover crops over the winter to prevent erosion.

Until last year, Les operated a 60 to 70 sow finishing unit.

"I raised pigs for 25 years, but no one wants to work seven days a week for nothing," he said of the low pork prices.

"We had a good year to sell corn instead of feeding it to the pigs," he said.

In addition to the paper work required by the farm, Carol finds time for needlework projects, mostly made for she and her husband's seven grandchildren.

Decisions are discussed and decided among them. Although Les as the older brother seems to have the most say sometimes, Dale said he recently voted no on a project where the others voted yes and they listened to him.

Carol, who keeps the books for the farm, said that her "no" carries some weight with it.

"The nice thing about our system is that we can usually always get off when we want too," Dale said.

All three brothers hunt, fish, and belong to a hunting camp in Tioga County. During hunting season, the three take turns between hunting and chores, but two always remain on the farm.

Recent weather has allowed plenty of snowmobiling fun. A log skidder was used to open the long driveway to the farm during blizzard weather.

"We (the wives) don't help with milking but let me make it clear that it's not because we don't want to but because we don't need to," said Judy who grew up on a farm and enjoys farm work. Instead, she runs errands for the farm, works part time in a local business office, and is a cleaning fanatic, according to her husband. She also enjoys flower arranging and herb gardening.

Carol and her husband have three children who are married in addition to 24-year-old son Wesley. Carol enjoys needlework, especially crosstitching and sewing for seven grandchildren. She often enters her projects in the Solanco Fair.

Several years ago, Les, Carol, their children and in-laws started a family tradition of butchering the old-fashioned way on the farm. Carol's grandparents, who were 90 years old at the time and had done butchering throughout their lifetime, oversaw the butchering. Carol taped the procedure, and she's glad that she did because two weeks later her grandfather died and six months later her grandmother died. Aided by their grandparents' previous instructions captured on video, the family continues annually to hold an old-fashioned butchering event complete with puddings, scrapple, and sausage.

Family traditions and farming go hand in hand with fun and hard work on the Landis family farm.

All three brothers hunt and fish, but two always remain on the farm to keep things running smoothly. All four walls of this room are covered with Les' hunting trophies.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative recently honored the Landis family with a plaque in honor of 50 years of milk shipping.

All Gardens Great & Small

by York Co. Horticultural Agent Tom Becker

Mid-Winter Tree Care

The winter of 1996 follows a mild, uneventful gardening season. This winter's record-breaking deep snow and ice storms are taking their toll on everyone's landscape. For example, animals feeding on stems and tree trunks under the snow may cause a great deal of tree damage this spring.

Low-temperature injury on plants happens to some extent every winter, but this year's deep snow is providing some insulation. But, many tender plants not buried in snow may not be hardy enough to withstand the cold. Low temperatures kill leaf and flower buds on these plants and destroy stems and branches not covered by snow. Surprisingly, some marginally hardy plants may be killed down to the soil even though they are protected by snow.

The extent of plant injury may depend on what kind of snow fell in your area. For example, the farm show week snow was light and dry. This kind of snow filters down through plants and helps protect them from the cold. But, heavy snow and ice storms break more stems and branches and even snap trunks of small trees. Deep snow forces rabbits and deer to forage on landscape plants, twigs and tree trunks.

This feeding injury on shrubs girdles branches three or four feet above the ground. The continuous snow cover also provides shelter for mice, which feed on lower stems and trunks and even on the root collars of plants. Pruning is the only remedy for plant parts that have been chewed, broken or killed by the cold.

Also, don't give up on a shrub that appears to have died all the way to the ground before spring. The plant may sprout again from the roots, later when mild weather comes.

The best way to prevent damage caused by deep snow and low temperatures is by selecting trees and shrubs that are hardy in your area. Contact your local Extension office for a list of hardy landscape plants. Tender plants should only be planted in protected sites, such as courtyards or eastern exposures.

Evergreen shrubs lose considerable moisture all winter long caused by cold, dry winds and sun. A shield or screen can be erected to deflect drying winds. Use a snow fence or screen using wooden posts and burlap. Antidesiccant sprays also can prevent wind injury.

The weight of ice or heavy, wet snow damages plants. The weight of a thick accumulation of ice and snow can cause extensive limb breakage in weak-wooded trees, like poplar, ash, silver maple or willow.

When selecting trees and shrubs for the home landscape, select plants less prone to damage from snow. Oaks, crabapples, pines, spruces and firs generally suffer light damage from snow.

Brush off heavy accumulations of snow on evergreens with a broom. Sharply bent, ice-covered branches on small trees can be propped up to prevent breakage. When shoveling sidewalks and driveways, don't throw heavy, wet snow or ice on shrubs or small trees.

Next week we'll discuss deicing materials that damage plants.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-8408.

Ida's Notebook

by Ida Risser

Winter is my time for reading. I thoroughly read the newspaper and numerous magazines too. I like the "Reader's Digest" for the variety of articles that it contains.

Recently, I ordered quite a number of historical books from a local organization. Then I was told that the one that I wanted the most was unavailable. However, one is a record of pioneer settlers in southeastern Pennsylvania. Most of these people were Swiss and German.

They had been persecuted in Europe and William Penn's promise of religious freedom brought them to America. It is said that of the 50,000 who left in early 1700s only 30,000 arrived. It took 12 to 14 weeks to cross the Atlantic Ocean. However, one vessel took more than 24 weeks and the food supply ran out so that they had to eat rats and mice. Most died and were buried at sea. The boat finally landed in New England instead of Philadelphia.

When the few remaining finally arrived at Conestoga in Lancaster County, their troubles were not over even though they had friends there. Many wild beasts lived in the area of panthers killed the swine. One farmer caught a wolf in his sheep pen and managed to kill it.

The Indians in the Conestoga area were not always friendly. Records show that they were cheated by white men and then retaliated. Drinking was also a problem among the Indians.

It is impossible to realize the great hardships that our ancestors endured!

No Calories But Possible Side Effects

How can olestra be a fat if it has no calories?

Olestra isn't your average kind of fat For those of you who haven't been keeping up with the headlines, olestra is the not-yet-approved fat substitute that is virtually limitless in possibilities for replacing high-calorie fats: It works even when fried

But the Food and Drug Administration is hesitating to give its stamp of approval, even though a panel in November agreed with maker Procter and Gamble that there's a "reasonable certainty of no harm" from olestra.

The reason? While side effects from olestra aren't necessarily a health hazard, the FDA is concerned enough about them — especially because of the amount some people are likely to consume — to weigh the matter more carefully than other new food ingredients.

To know how olestra works, first you should know about fat. Fats are triglycerides — three fatty acids attached to glycerol. Enzymes from the pancreas cut apart the molecule in the small intestine so the substances can be absorbed into the bloodstream.

Olestra isn't a triglyceride at all. It uses a molecule of sucrose with six, seven or even eight fatty acids attached to it. With that many fatty acids, enzymes can't break it apart before it gets through the digestive system. If it isn't broken down, it isn't absorbed and doesn't add calories to your diet.

So far so good? Unfortunately, here's where the problem starts It's what scientists call "leakage."

Think about it: If the substance is fat-like, and it's not broken down in the intestine, then it's going to be fat-like on the way out, too. Potato chips made with olestra wouldn't be marketed as a laxative, but they could have that effect. The panel giving the OK to olestra said this might be gross (well, it didn't use that term), but it's not a health risk.

Some scientists are also worried that olestra could drain fat-soluble vitamins (A, D, E and K), but olestra can be fortified with these vitamins to prevent that from occurring. And although the panel discounted it, other scientists are worried about olestra's tendency to remove certain antioxidants from the body

Olestra is now being considered only for use in chips, crackers and other snacks If approved, it would take about six months for products to reach grocery store shelves

Book About Barns Available

BOOK REPORT: American Barns: A Pictorial History, is a photo-history book that celebrates some of the rural heritage that resides in its barns, a vanishing icon of our agricultural heritage. This beautifully illustrated volume records traditional American Barns in their classic regional styles—the red barns of Vermont, round Shaker barns, bank barns of Southeastern Pennsylvania, Kentucky horse barns, and the rustic barns of the Plains. More than 90 full-color photographs highlight dramatic architectural details, creating a memorable testament to an American tradition.

The 9x12,, 80 page hardcover book with full color photographs is written by Jill Caravan, a native of Southeastern Pennsylvania, and published by Courage Books. The price is $12.98. Contact your local bookstore or call the publisher's customer service at 1-800-345-5359.

Flood-Related Help Available

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As counties across Pennsylvania clean up the mud, ice, and water from recent storms, homeowners and local officials can look to Penn State Cooperative Extension offices for information on subjects ranging from crop damage to home water damage to food safety.

Information is available in every county extension office. People may also call their county Penn State office where they may obtain the county's access number for PENpages, which has a wealth of flood information from Penn State and other universities.

To find flood-related information on the database, enter "1996 Flood" as a keywood. Information in specific categories, such as crop damage, crop information, food safety, water safety, and home care, will be listed as well.

Each extension office has access to the system, and the staff can provide copies of any document on the system in response to a specific request.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know whom to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

There's no need to send a SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — F. Eleanor Rebuck is on a fat- and salt-free diet. She wanted to know the ingredients used in soft ice cream or frozen custard. Thanks to Lester McCurdy, Lebanon, who served soft ice cream and milkshakes for the past 28 years. He wrote that soft ice cream is required by state law to have at least 10 percent butter fat. Ice milk must be less than 10 percent and milkshakes are in the neighborhood of 4 percent butter fat, although no law governs that. Salt is not in soft ice cream.

ANSWER — Gail Hunter, Smithsburg, Md., wanted a recipe for creamed lettuce. Thanks to Beatrice Wright, Duncannon, for sending a recipe that her mother made when she was a child. Beatrice has now used the recipe for 49 years. She writes that her family uses it instead of gravy and it is very good with pot pie, noodles, and pig maw. The Wrights serve creamed lettuce every time they have company and have never had a person who doesn't like it.

Creamed Lettuce

½ pint whipping cream
⅔ cup sugar
⅓ cup vinegar

Beat cream until foamy. Add sugar and vinegar slowly. Beat slowly as it will thicken fast. Add lettuce.

Sugar and vinegar may be adjusted to suit your taste.

ANSWER — Linda Ludwig, Reading, wanted a recipe for banana crumb cake. Thanks to Pat Steinbaecher, Washington Boro, for sending a recipe.

Banana Crumb Cake

½ cup margarine
8-ounces cream cheese
1¼ cups sugar
2 eggs
1 cup mashed ripe bananas
1 teaspoon vanilla
2¼ cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
Pinch salt
1 cup chopped pecans
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons sugar

Combine margarine, softened cream cheese and sugar, mixing until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Blend in bananas and vanilla. Gradually add sifted flour with baking powder, baking soda, and salt.

Mix together nuts, cinnamon, and sugar; fold half of nut mixture into batter. Pour into 13x9-inch baking pan.

Sprinkle with remaining nut mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

If anyone knows of another source, please send it in.

I must not throw upon the floor

My parents labor very hard
To get us wholesome food.
So I must not throw upon the floor
The food that would do others good. . . .

With the high cost of today's pesticides, can you afford sloppy application?

Willmar Air Ride™ lets you apply 1/2 ounce per acre at 12 mph.

Today's post-emerge herbicides and insecticides are so powerful they're applied at almost unbelievably low rates. Like 1/2 ounce per acre in solution. That means you need an applicator as precise as the chemistry. And, because timing with these new products is so critical, you need a self-propelled applicator nimble enough to get into fields even in the mud.

For dependable application of today's sophisticated pre-emerge and post-emerge chemicals, more custom applicators and large farmers rely on Willmar Air Ride. Here are just some of the reasons :

- Unequaled visibility, driver comfort and convenience.
- Patented Air Bag Suspension adjusts on-the-go.
- 60 ft. boom, 600 gal. tank for more acres per day.
- Articulated steering minimizes crop damage.
- Wheel tracks adjust from the cab to fit row widths.
- Low-compaction tires grip soft ground, yet won't crush crops.
- Adjustable boom fits various crop heights.
- Reliable John Deere engine, long-term dependability.

Dekalb Awarded Bt Corn Patent

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that it was issued the first product patent covering insect-resistant corn plants.

The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office granted Dekalb U.S. Patent #5,484,956 covering fertile, transgenic corn plants expressing genes encoding Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) insecticidal proteins.

BT is a naturally occurring soil bacteria used to control insect pests. The insertion of a Bt insecticidal protein gene into a corn hybrid provides resistance to the European corn borer, the corn crop's most damaging pest. Dekalb expects to bring its corn borer resistant products to market in 1997.

"This broad product patent represents a major addition to Dekalb's evolving portfolio of intellectual property," said Bruce P. Bickner, chairman and chief executive officer.

"The real beneficiaries of Bt corn will be America's farmers," Bickner said. "The corn borer can cost U.S. farmers as much as $1 billion in lost yields annually."

In September 1995, Dekalb announced that it had received notice of allowance from the U.S. Patent Office for the first claims to fertile, transformed corn plants. The claims covered transformed corn expressing a seed storage protein, which will help make corn a more nutritious animal feed. Dekalb also was recently allowed patent claims for corn cells transformed via electroporation technology, broadening the scope of an earlier electroporation process patent.

Detacher Line Has New Omni Elite Series

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — Surge has combined state-of-the-art pneumatic controls, the built-in intelligence of "Omni Logic" and the accuracy and reliability of Surge patented optic sensing into a complete line of Surge Omni Elite Detachers.

The Omni Detacher Control has the built-in Surge "Omni Logic." An integrated circuit board provides the flexibility to adjust the milk let-down delay, vacuum-on delay, and end-of-milk delay to optimize milking efficiency.

Unlike all other takeoff sensing devices, Surge patented Optic Sensing actually "sees" the milk flow through the milk-flow sensor. The milk breaks a beam of light during milking. When the milk flow stops, the infrared light beam is again received by the detector and a signal is sent to the Omni control. Following the adjustable end-of-milking time delay, the vacuum is shut off, the pressure inside the milker unit is equalized to the atmospheric level, and the unit gently detaches. This soft takeoff feature of the Omni Logic promotes cow comfort and udder health.

The automatic recalibration of the Optic Sensor between each cow milked ensures consistent detacher performance from cow to cow.

The detachers are available in three models: arm, chain, and parallel chain. All three models are air operated with push button controls, and fully constructed of stainless steel to ensure a long life and low maintenance.

Dekalb Obtains Rights To Technology

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that it has signed an agreement with E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Company under which Dekalb receives access to DuPont's intellectual property rights to the Biolistic® "gene gun" and certain nutritional quality traits.

DuPont, in turn, receives rights to utilize certain of Dekalb's intellectual property relating to corn transformation and enhanced amino acid traits.

Under terms of the agreement, Dekalb receives a commercial license to DuPont's Biolistic® and cre-lox technology. "A license to DuPont's gene gun, which complements Dekalb's proprietary transformation technology, is an important step toward ensuring freedom to commercialize Dekalb's pipeline of transgenic seed products," said Bruce P. Bickner, Dekalb's chairman and chief executive officer.

"The bombardment method of corn transformation that Dekalb has developed, and for which we have several patent claims, is the technology of choice for transforming corn throughout the seed industry. Dekalb's researchers will use cre-lox technology to further enhance their transformation capabilities."

Dekalb also received rights to certain DuPont intellectual property and products in the areas of nutritionally enhanced corn and soybeans, including high-oil corn and high-lysine soybeans.

Kubota, U.S. Affiliates File Trade Action

TORRANCE, Calif. — Kubota Corporation, a leading manufacturer of agricultural equipment based in Osaka, Japan, and two of its United States affiliates, Kubota Tractor Corporation and Kubota Manufacturing of America Corporation, have filed an action with the International Trade Commission in Washington, D.C. to stop the importation, distribution, and sale in the United States of "gray market" Kubota tractors designed for sale in the Japanese market.

These "gray market" tractors are materially different in several respects, including safety features, from comparable Kubota tractors designed for sale in the United States.

The importation, distribution and sale of the "gray market" Kubota tractors have caused and are likely to cause confusion in the marketplace. The Kubota companies are taking this action to protect their valuable proprietary rights, their reputation, and the United States consumer.

Seedway To Market Biological Fungicide

HALL, N.Y. — Seedway has announced it will be marketing T-22, a new biological fungicide for agricultural and vegetable crops in its market area. The product is produced by TGT, Inc., Geneva, N.Y.

T-22 is a "root fungicide" designed to control root diseases. The active ingredient is a selected strain of Trichoderma.

The treatment is non-toxic to all plants/animals/humans and provides excellent control of fusarium, phythium, rhizoctonia and other root damaging fungi.

A major benefit of T-22 is that it is a living organism that actually grows on the roots for the life of the plant, enhancing root development, nutrient exchange, moisture uptake, and giving strong disease protection.

The product is available in planter box treatment for all field crops, including field and sweet corn, soybeans, dry beans and peas. A granular formulation is also available for in-furrow and seed bed applications.

HUTCHINSON, Kan.—Krause Corporation recently announced the introduction of the 5500 Series Pro-Air no-till drill, with individual vacuum seed metering units.

The patented vacuum metering system allows the Krause 5500 Series drill to singulate a wide variety of seeds such as soybeans, small edible beans, peas, sunflowers, grain sorghum and corn.

The 5500's vacuum metering system makes it easier for farmers to switch from one size seed to another (soybeans for example) without having to make seed cup adjustments. Four seed discs are provided for each metering unit and include a disc for soybeans, corn, grain sorghum and small grains.

5500 Series Pro-Air drills are available in 7½ inch or 10 inch row spacing and a choice of 10 feet, 13 feet, 15 feet, or 20 feet.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 12th annual Pennsylvania Crop Management Association (PCMA) meeting, entitled "Tomorrow's Economics from Yesterday's Records," was held recently at the Penn State Scanticon Conference Center and Hotel.

The meeting began with PCMA President John Ligo recognizing the many people in attendance: crop management association (CMA) farmers and crop consultants, and representatives from Penn State, agricultural agencies, and businesses. He also honored the state's four senior crop consultants: Martin Krone, Kevin Mitchell, Gary Micsky, and Tom Morgart.

The first speaker was Sen. Roger Madigan of Pennsylvania's 23rd district, also a member of Penn State's board of trustees: Madigan applauded crop management associations for promoting more economical, efficient, and environmentally sound crop production practices. In addition, he indicated that he and only one other Pennsylvania senator have real farm backgrounds. Thus, he challenged the audience to keep state and U.S. senators up-to-date on agricultural issues. He also indicated that farmers need to maintain a competitive edge locally, nationally and internationally.

Filling in for Pennsylvania Executive Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Walt Peechatka, not present because of the winter flood emergency, was Lee Bentz, integrated pest management coordinator for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Bentz gave a nutrient management and IPM update. He focused on a new publication which explores the status of IPM throughout the state, and mentioned several educational IPM videos which are in production.

A brief message was delivered by Bill Baumgartner, state executive director of the Farm Services Agency. He indicated agriculture agencies are in the process of consolidating, as well as reducing their work force due to budgetary constraints. He also stated that FSA will continue to cost-share for integrated crop management.

Following was Penn State Agronomy Department Head Steve Fales. He confirmed the department's dedication to CMAs and to Penn State's Crop Management Program. Fales also stressed that the impact of the information revolution must be utilized to sway the focus on agriculture from negative to positive. Further, he stated that as agricultural procedures change to adopt technological advances, so will agricultural education need to adapt to provide today's students with current technological information and practices as well as the skills to work practically and effectively with those innovations.

Lou Moore, professor of agricultural economics, urged farmers to invest time in production and financial record keeping and in the study of commodities futures. He showed that well-kept records can aid producers in making sound decisions for the future, encouraged the crowd with news of an impending boom in the grain business and of rising land values, and urged farmers to purchase seed early to ensure acquisition of desirable varieties.

Mel Brown, Centre County Cooperative extension agent and PCMA founding father, continued with the idea of keeping accurate and timely records. He stressed that farmers can expect the best recommendations from crop consultants only if they provide consultants with solid farm record histories. Further, good records can aid farmers when seeking help from financial institutions, and especially when working to maintain a competitive edge within the farming community.

The morning's final speaker, Jay Harper, associate professor of agricultural economics, delivered an evaluation of CMA crop records from an economist's perspective. By presenting various scenarios, he illustrated that, depending on growing conditions, the benefits and costs of being in a CMA may be hard to measure at a glance. However, if considered over a long period of time, the cost factor is feasible, and the benefits are quite worthwhile.

The afternoon session began with Mercer County CMA Crop Consultant Gary Micsky. Micsky, offering a consultant's perspective of record keeping, cited one of the major rewards as being able to work with farmers in his home area to learn about what kinds of things producers are experiencing. Another reward, he said, is being able to make better decisions as a result of accurate and timely information. Among the challenges of record keeping, he cited the area of time management, the tedious nature of data entry, the difficulty of motivating farmers to provide him with data, and trying not to lose sight of what farmers really want.

Penn State Agronomy Professor Elwood Hatley built his speech around the premise that as we move into the 21st century we will be exposed to increasingly vast amounts of information. The increased availability of information will lead to precision agriculture. This technologically-advanced practice of agriculture will be performed and accounted for with the latest technologies, managed by informed producers, and accompanied by excellent records.

Following Hatley was Associate Professor of Forage Management Marvin Hall, who addressed the issue of using CMA records to improve forage crop production. Hall used Mercer County CMA data to show that records are a vital component for planning forage seedings. Past records show successful and failed practices in black and white, can highlight seemingly unobvious problems, and can therefore be valuable tools in planning for the future.

Agronomy department Senior Research Associate Lynn Hoffman accented the fact that the study of field records can dramatically increase productivity and profitability. Further, he stated that anyone who is offered the chance, as all CMA farmers are, to gain access to such detailed, field-specific records should take advantage of the opportunity. Farmers not utilizing the services provided them by their CMAs are denying themselves the opportunity to be more profitable and more productive.

The final speaker of the day was Peter Bohn, senior project associate for the Department of Agronomy. Bohn compared nutrient management practices among CMA members, showing that site-specific factors such as weather patterns and soil types are some of the variabilities that may account for the differences among farms across the nine CMAs.

The 12th annual PCMA board meeting was attended by more than 65 CMA farmers, crop consultants, agronomy and agricultural economics experts, and members of various agricultural related agencies and businesses. PCMA members, armed with excellent record keeping information, will look forward to a promising year in 1996.

ASA To Conduct CEO Search

BOZEMAN, Mont.—Brian G. Kitchen, executive vice president of the American Simmental Association for the past five-and-a-half years, has tendered his resignation.

Robert Haralson, vice chairman and chairman-elect of the ASA board of trustees from Atkins, Ark., announced that the board had received and had accepted Kitchen's resignation.

"We accept Brian's resignation with regret," he said. "However, he has found employment dealing with import-export of cattle, and we wish him well in his new endeavor."

Haralson, who will assume the position of board chairman on Feb. 10 when the ASA Annual Convention is held in Jackson, Miss., indicated that he will name a CEO search committee at that meeting.

"After that committee has been assembled and we have finalized the job description, we will begin accepting applications," Haralson said.

In the interim, Steve McGuire, ASA's director of processing and a 23-year employee, will serve as acting CEO. McGuire had previously served in that capacity in 1990, before Kitchen was hired.

Simmental Association Elects Board Members

BOZEMAN, Mont.—The membership of the American Simmental Association (ASA) has elected six new members to its 16-member board of trustees.

Dennis Breinig, Arapahoe, Neb.; Emmet Butcher, Lewistown, Mont.; Sarah Buxkemper, Ballinger, Texas; Merle Knuth, Ubandale, Iowa; Jim Ligon, Cookeville, Tenn.; and W.R. "Dick" Williams, Traveler's Rest, S.C. are the newly-elected members of the board. Butcher had previously served on the ASA board from 1976 to 1982, and Williams had served from 1990 to 1993.

Breinig operates a family farm that maintains 450 beef cows, split equally among a commercial herd, a registered Simmental herd, and a registered Angus base herd for a crossbreeding program. A Simmental breeder since 1974, he's a long-time board member of the Nebraska Simmental Association, and has served as NSA President. In addition, he's a member of the National, Nebraska and Sandhills Cattlemen's Associations, and serves on the board of the Nebraska Cattlemen's Classic. A graduate of Chadron State College, he holds a bachelor's in agribusiness.

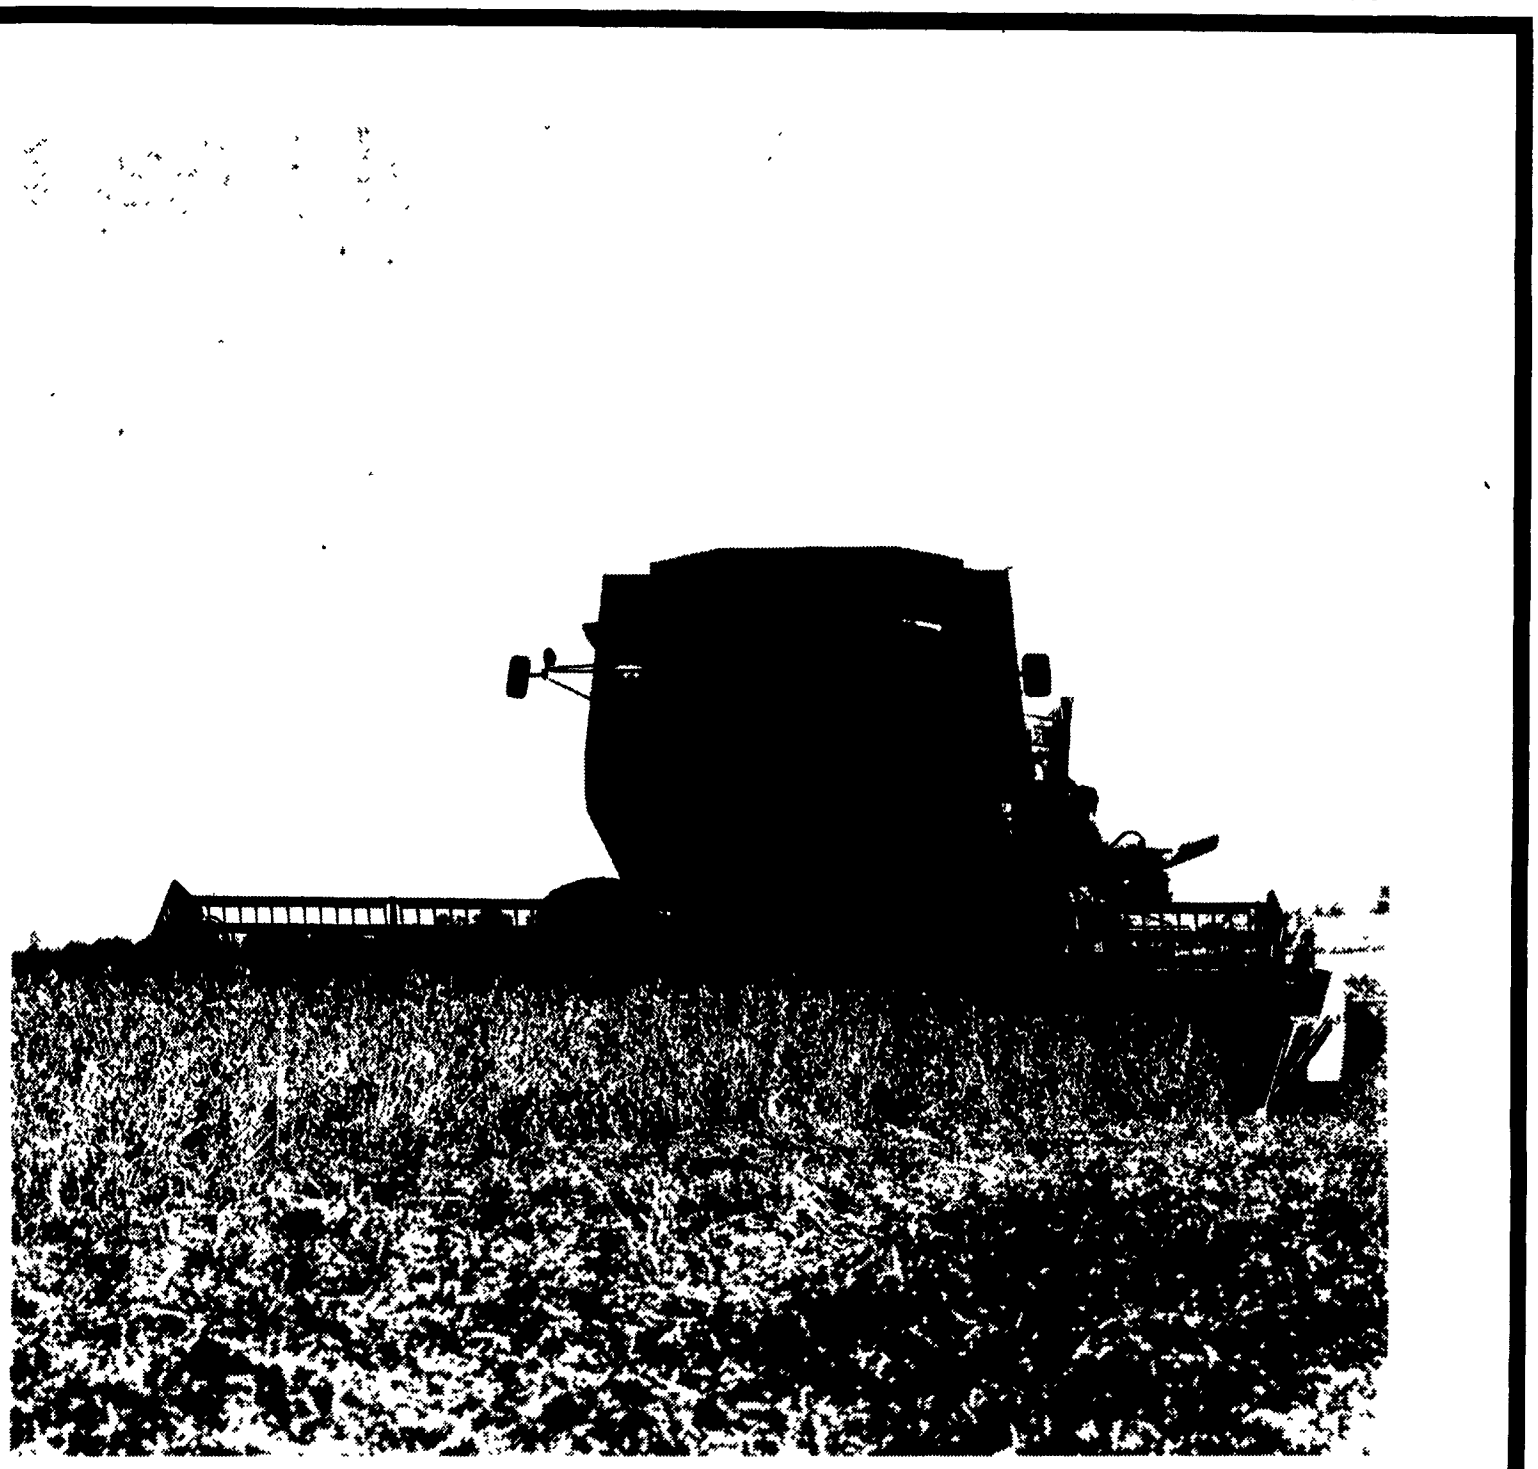
In conjunction with his two sons, Jim and Tom, Butcher owns and operates Gateway Simmentals, a 600-cow seedstock operation. Involved with Simmental since their introduction in the U.S., Butcher was a founding director, a president and secretary-treasurer of the Montana Simmental Association.

Buxkemper owns and operates RX Simbrah, Ballinger, Texas, in conjunction with her daughters, Lucy and Ana, and son-in-law, Todd Henderson, DVM.

Knuth currently owns and manages Knuth Farms Simmentals, an 800-acre operation, maintaining a herd of 45 registered Simmental cows.

Ligon is an animal science instructor and farm manager at Tennessee Tech University. In addition, he is a partner in a diverse family farm operation that includes Simmental cattle, swine, and sheep.

Williams owns and operates Twin Gates Farm. He maintains a purebred herd of about 100 head and markets his cattle through the state sale, state-sponsored bull tests and private treaty. He served as president of the South Carolina Simmental Association for two years.



WHAT'S WRONG WITH THEIR HARVESTING SYSTEM IS WHAT'S RIGHT WITH OURS.

We all know that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. And when it comes to harvesting your crop, it's also the most gentle. So our Natural Flow Harvesting System does just that. We mounted the cylinder transversely. This means, that, unlike other combines, your crop never changes direction. And that means that there's less chance of crop damage. Even the unloader tube has been designed so there are no right angles, but a smooth, gentle flow of your crop as it's sent on its way, in a straight line, the best way. The GLEANER® way. It's not too early to begin planning for storing your valuable feeds for 1996! Quality forages and grains become more important as margins decrease in the dairy and livestock industries.

When you think of "quality" feeds, you need to consider "quality" storage. Farmers all over the East (from Maine to Florida, and West to the Mississippi River), are turning to the poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO to protect the quality of their feeds.

Listen to what these farmers from VA say about their switch to a poured concrete silo for their hi-moisture shelled corn storage: "Even during the hottest summer in our memory, the shelled corn from our poured concrete silo has kept its bright yellow color and has not heated. We have the best hi-moisture shelled corn ever."

Signed: Keith Wilson, Paul Wilson, Gerald Garber, Cave View Farms, Inc., Weyers Cave, VA.

"THE BLIZZARD OF '93, THE SEVERE WINTER OF '94. THE SNOWY FALL OF '95, the HOT SUMMER OF '95 and THE BLIZZARD OF '96 all INCREASE YOUR APPRECIATION OF THE CONCRETE TOWER SILO" MEMBER: International Silo Association/PA Forage and Grassland Council/AM Society of Agricultural Engineers/Crop Storage Institute.

You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

Equipment cost is not the only cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller® milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$31 000	$28 000
Cost of electricity @ 08 kW for 12 000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17 550	$22 850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48 550	$50 850
Savings	$ 2 300

HIGH TENSILE FENCE...THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT
717-899-7617
BEAVER FENCE SYSTEMS

Darren Peachey, Belleville, PA
"The spring of 1995 was a turning point for our dairy operation as we moved from a high input operation to an intensive grazing system. Intensive Grazing has been everything we hoped it would be Our cows are healthier and we have less labor per cow. The life of our machinery will be longer All in all it spells higher profits.
The first thing we did was talk to other people who were grazing to get ideas that we could incorporate into our dairy operation We hired Beaver Fence Systems to build high tensile fence around the entire farm and we use portable fence to divide the interior into paddocks.
Today's dairy economy does not allow us to keep doing things the way we have always done them. We need to keep looking for more profitable ways of producing milk and managing our land. Intensive grazing has made our business more profitable."

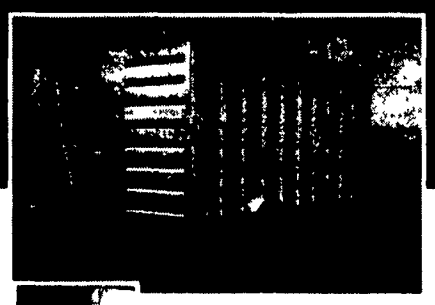
Agriculture Moves on EBY Bodies



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- LIVESTOCK BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of heights and widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24'; landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer custom options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business- building bodies to haul it is ours.

Let EBY custom build one for you.

Window Of Opportunity Opens For U.S Beef In Russia

DENVER, Col.—A significant window of opportunity is opening for the U.S. beef industry in Russia as economic gains in this rapidly developing nation continue to bypass the agricultural sector. "There is a potent import market for U.S. beef for at least the next ten to fifteen years," says Nathan Hunt, U.S. Meat Export Federation-Moscow representative.

Hunt told industry leaders earlier this month at a USMEF strategic planning session in Denver that, despite economic gains in Russia, there has been no recovery in agriculture. "The collapse of Russian agriculture continues at full speed," says Hunt. "Herd sizes are dropping and the downward spiral of domestic beef production is still accelerating. As a consequence, trade opportunities for U.S. beef and beef variety meat items (offals) have grown tremendously in Russia."

From virtual obscurity less than three years ago, the Russian market has grown exponentially to make Russia the fourth largest export market for U.S. beef and beef variety meat items in the world. Sales of U.S. beef and beef variety meats to Russia totaled 46,571 metric tons for the Jan.-Sept. 1995 period. This is up 173 percent from 16,998 metric tons for the same period last year. Hunt foresees continued growth in U.S. beef sales to Russia well into the next century.

USMEF began aggressively to pursue trade opportunities in the region in the early 1990s with the advent of economic reforms in the Former Soviet Union. Much of this groundbreaking work is being done with financial support from USDA's Market Promotion Program and producer checkoff dollars.

"The volatility of the market requires that we spend much of our time and resources identifying and qualifying Russian buyers," says Hunt. "We're also working around the clock to better understand this rapidly changing market and its distribution system and to educate the trade."

Hunt points out that most meat in Russia is further processed and consumed as sausage. When it is consumed as a table meat, Russians traditionally cover it with a sauce to make up for the poor quality. At checkoff-funded seminars and cutting demonstrations, USMEF representatives give Russian buyers their first taste of high-quality U.S. beef and talk about such basics as what grain-fed cattle are and why grain-fed beef is of higher quality. USMEF also uses checkoff dollars to bring teams of Russian buyers to the United States to see the U.S. production and distribution system firsthand.

"We're doing very well in Russia, but we're not able to take full advantage of the potential because we have yet to find the right product to make the best price match for Russia's needs," says Hunt. "In 1996, this will be a priority for us."

Russia offers two distinct markets for U.S. beef, explains Hunt. The HRI sector wants high-quality beef, and the major processors, which represent the biggest market segment, buy beef variety meats, especially livers. Until recently, Russian demand has been limited to lower valued cuts and variety meat items. This situation is changing, according to Hunt, as more Russian people are attaining affluence. Although the average Russian income is still quite low, 2-3% now earn in excess of US $100,000 per year. This affluent segment of the population is up from .1% a few years ago, offering new export potential for high-quality U.S. beef.

Unlike any other country in the world, the United States has the capacity to deliver the large volumes of beef variety meat items necessary to meet the enormous consumer demand in Russia. According to Hunt, price, not quality is the issue when selling variety meats in Russia. In this area, he adds, the United States is very competitve.

The U.S. Meat Export Federation is a national trade association responsible for developing foreign markets for U.S. red meat products. Headquartered in Denver, USMEF has eight marketing offices around the world. USMEF members include livestock producers, packers, processors, purveyors, feed grain producers and allied industries.

Corn/Soy Conference Feb. 15

NEWARK, Del.—Andy Hunt and his father, Robert, have been farming in Morris, Ill., for so long it's become a family tradition, Hunt said. What's new on their 2,000 acres of corn and soybeans is the use of the Global Positioning System (GPS).

GPS uses government satellites to give exact field location of tractors mounted with computerized receivers. This technology has allowed Hunt to use precision farming methods that tailor inputs to specific soil and crop needs.

For example, a 50-acre field may have considerable variation in soil requirements. GPS can give the correct location of a tractor within five feet. This information, coupled with a computer program such as Geographic Information System, allows farmers to dispense only the amount of inputs necessary for that location of the field, thus saving money and protecting the environment.

Hunt is keynote speaker for the 1996 Delmarva Corn and Soybean Technology Conference on Thursday, Feb. 15, at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury, Md. At 1:30 p.m., he will tell Delmarva farmers how GPS fits in with his precision-farming operation.

"After reading a couple of articles about GPS, we started grid sampling four years ago, then added yield monitoring," Hunt said. "We now have three years of yield maps and have also added variable planting populations and variable rate applications of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and lime. I have no doubt that it is paying for itself."

But Hunt said the biggest payoff is in increased information.

"There is information on the farm that we haven't been harnessing," he said. "With this information we can improve management skills. And in a sense, our whole farm becomes a research effort. The maps let us know what's going on in each area. We can prove what works and what doesn't.

"It's important to use the new technologies we've developed," he said. "The agricultural community has the capability to be more profitable. Also there are environmental pluses. As we learn to use this technology, we'll be better farmers and better environmentalists."

The conference, sponsored by the Universities and Cooperative Extension Systems of Delaware and Maryland as well as area agribusinesses, will begin at 8 a.m. and end at 2:30 p.m. The conference will also feature topics on moving into the biotechnology age, productior. economics of grain sorghum, and surfactants: technology of the future. Conference participants also will have the chance to visit commercial exhibits and booths.

Marketing Strategies Theme For PASA Conference

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — Robert J. Matarazzo is a master at return. As a marketing director for a New Jersey tomato-growers' cooperative, he generated $450,000 worth of media attention on a $12,000 investment in 1995.

As a third-generation farmer, he routinely turns his off-season visits with customers into sales-generating proposals. And he regularly achieves the golden rule of retailing: 80 percent of the sales of his crops come from 20 percent of his customers.

The key, he said, is planning, and he said his 20-acre fruit and vegetable farm is the perfect example. Before he ever sows the seed, he knows exactly where he'll sell the crop.

Matarazzo, a Belvidere, N.J., farmer, is to explain the value of promotion and marketing during three different workshops at the Fifth Annual Farming for the Future Conference, Feb. 9 and 10, at Penn State. This year's theme is "Growing Markets, Adding Value, Sustaining Farms."

The conference is sponsored yearly by Pa. Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA).

Matarazzo's qualifications to be one of the featured presenters at this year's conference comes from several perspectives. He's at once a fruit and vegetable farmer; owner of the 12,000-gallon-a-year Four Sisters Winery; owner of his own marketing farm, RJM Marketing; and the marketing director of the New Jersey Council (a cooperative formed in 1995) and New Jersey Asparagus Farms, Inc.

On Saturday, Feb. 10, Matarazzo will present one of the 8 a.m. concurrent sessions at the conference, "Taking Care of Number One," in which he'll review the strategies that he says keep customers returning to his farm store.

"I believe in getting new customers, but if I have $100 to spend on customers, I spend $80 of it on my existing customers and $20 for new ones," he said. "Too often, I hear that retailers don't have any plans to make their customers happy. I say that taking care of the existing clientele will result in an increase in sales. You take care of the people who take care of you."

Some of the tried-and-true methods he uses to nurture a positive feeling are a periodical newsletter for customers, a frequent buyers' club and 14 special events throughout the season.

"We have pick your own strawberries and hold a strawberry social in conjunction with it. For $400 worth of advertising, we draw 11,000 people and New York media," he said. The rest of the season is peppered with a Mother's Day brunch that typically serves 350, a native American pow-wow, as well as the standard farmsite fare: educational tours and hayrides.

Planning is the only way it works. "We start to plan for all these events as early as January," he said. In fact, he recommends multi-year planning (four or five years, preferably) as one of the key ways farmers can stay on course to meet long-term goals.

Matarazzo will review the value of advance preparation in another workshop later in the day, "Developing a Marketing Plan." There he'll explain this philosophy: "Promotion is the tool I use to get people to my market. I use marketing once they're here to bring them back again and again."

He said that farmers shouldn't fear marketing or promotion, they should use them as simple, low-cost, highly effective tools. His promotional program relies heavily on press releases as an efficient use of local media.

"Through promotion, we get people to come to the store, to develop our identity and recognition," he said. Once the customer is in the store, marketing finishes the sale. "We put up a poster on 100 different ways to cook zucchini," said Matarazzo. "That's marketing."

For growers who want to partner in order to share costs and benefits, Matarazzo's third workshop of the day is, "Grower Cooperatives: Reducing Costs and Expanding Markets," where he'll explain the unqualified success of last summer's campaign to promote New Jersey-grown tomatoes.

Matarazzo served as marketing director of the New Jersey Tomato Council, which formed a cooperative to promote several varieties of tomatoes.

"One of the most positive things about working with a co-op is that you develop a unified group with similar goals and objectives. And as a basic rule, it forces you to create a marketing plan," he said. For three months, beginning in May 1995, the $12,000 promotional program generated $450,000 worth of free media coverage resulting in an increased demand for New Jersey tomatoes.

Along with Matarazzo's three workshops, conference attendees interested in marketing strategies can learn how to develop or participate in a "farm-to-chef" network, which links farmers to restaurant owners and food preparation specialists.

On the four-person panel for the Friday morning workshop are two farmers who sell extensively to urban restaurants (Cass Peterson, of Fulton County; and Mark Dornstreich, of Bucks County), an inn owner who seeks out local and organic farm products (Grant Gentzlinger, of Settlers Inn, in Hawley, Pa.) and Ilene Henshaw, the facilitator of a farm-to-chef network in the Washington D.C. area that links ecologically minded chefs with local farmers.

Another marketing related workshop on Saturday morning is to focus on farmers' markets. Expect to hear both the success stories and the drawbacks of conventional farmers' markets and creative alternatives.

Leading the discussion will be two veteran farmers' marketers: Jim Crawford, of New Morning Farm, in Hustontown; and Edwin Rankin, of Twin Springs Fruit Farm, in Gettysburg.

The conference isn't limited to East Coast marketing strategies and tales. Sarah Vogel, commissioner of agriculture for the state of North Dakota, will bring the opening keynote address, relating her experience as she helped redirect her state's economic plan to promote farming, agricultural processing and co-op development.

The second keynote address of the conference will be delivered by Eliot Coleman, known for his two best-sellers, "The New Organic Grower: A Master's Manual of Tools and Techniques for the Market Gardener," and "Four-Season Harvest: How to Harvest Fresh Organic Vegetables from your Home Garden All Year Long."

The Fifth Annual Farming for the Future Conference is sponsored by Penn State, Rodale Institute, Walnut Acres, Penn Ag Industries, Albert's Organics, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Fertrell, PA Farmers Union, Center for Rural PA, American Farmland Trust, PA Organic Crop Improvement Assns., Dairy Network Partnership, Penns Woods Organics, and TOG Coop.

Grazing Conference March 6-7

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)—The 1996 Pennsylvania Grazing Conference and Trade Show will be held Wednesday and Thursday, March 6-7, at the Embers in Carlisle.

This is the second year for the event, sponsored by the Grazing Research and Education Center in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council.

The purpose of the conference is to present useful and current information to a wide range of people interested in grazing.

Featured speaker for this year's conference is Dave Forgey, a highly successful grazier and Hoard's Dairyman columnist from Indiana. Other speakers from outside Pennsylvania are Jim Green, agronomist from North Carolina, and Danny Fox, beef nutrition and management specialist from Cornell.

On Wednesday morning, Dave Forgey will talk about his transition from confinement housing to grazing, and about his plans for the future. In the afternoon he will focus on putting all the pieces of a successful grazing system together. Jim Green will talk about the principals of grazing management. In the morning, and again in the afternoon, people can attend one of three breakout sessions to hear experienced graziers and other experts discuss their experiences with watering systems, fencing systems, and paddock and lane layouts. That evening, a panel of four graziers will discuss animal behavior as it relates to grazing.

Thursday morning, Danny Fox will talk about raising dairy heifers and beef on pasture, and Jim Green will focus on fine tuning a controlled grazing system. In the morning, people can attend two of three breakout sessions on hot season grazing, raising dairy heifers on grass, and raising beef on pasture. That afternoon, they can attend one of three sessions on leader/follower groups, calf raising on pasture, and low cost milking systems.

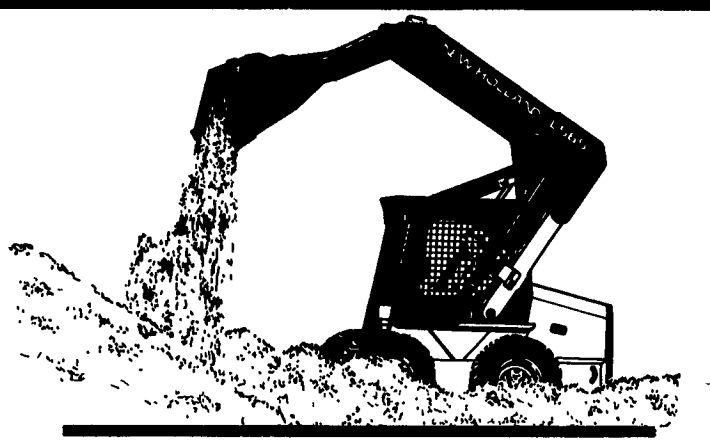
THE RELIABLE ONE



TOUGHER THAN THE REST

The New Holland Model L565 Super Boom™ skid-steer loader is tougher, more durable and more reliable than ever.

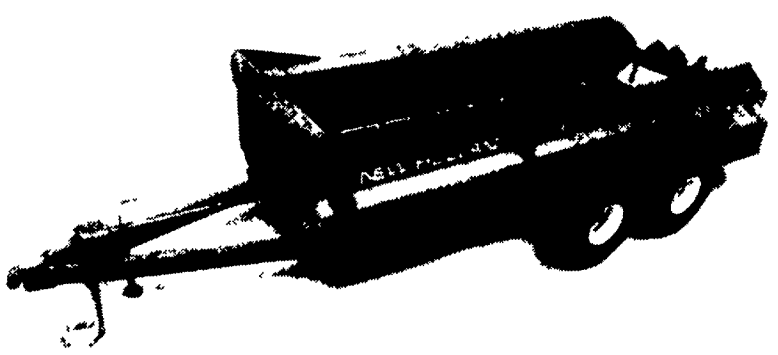
The "L565" offers a 40 horsepower diesel engine with an SAE load rating of a powerful 1,500 pounds.

The Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system makes it compatible with New Holland and competitive attachments. The strong boom design and massive loader pins make it more reliable. And the quick engine access makes it easier to service.

See what makes the Super Boom so tough.

NEW HOLLAND

CAPACITY KING



THE BIGGEST

The New Holland Model 195 box spreader is up to your biggest spreading job.

- Capacity. The "195" takes on 410 bushels (440 cu. ft.) without flinching
- Strong construction. Corrosion-resistant steels last and last. And an HDPE floor means smooth unloading, even in cold weather.
- Bonded Protection warranty. If the polyethylene floor fails or the sides rust, we'll replace them free for 12 years.
- Fast clean out...even with this big-capacity strong box.
- Large tandem oscillating wheels. Allow faster ground speeds in rough terrain, with less ground compaction.

Check out our biggest New Holland Spreader from the biggest name in spreaders.

Two New Knight ProTwin Heavy Duty V Type Manure Spreaders In Stock At Binkley & Hurst Bros. For Immediate Delivery

Retire Your Current Spreaders!

The 8000 Series ProTwin Slingers can handle a wider range of materials than any other spreader . . .

With the patented twin auger design, material circulates inside the unit. This unique action helps keep the load level during normal operation as well as during start-up, fine spreading, and closed-door turns

As a result of the twin auger system and the steep angle sides, material bridging and excess forward movement of material are virtually eliminated, even in pen packed and sticky feed lot material

Examine the material flow in the illustration below and note that the left auger moves material forward to the discharge hammers The slightly raised right auger moves the material rearward while keeping the left auger evenly charged with material. It is this patented circulating action that makes the ProTwin so effective in handling the toughest material encountered in most applications

Twin Auger Design History

The first ProTwin model, the Industrial 8030 unit, was introduced in the summer of 1993. The total acceptance of the ProTwin Slinger by agricultural and industrial operators in handling the toughest waste material has been phenomenal

Originally, the 8030 ProTwin was targeted for industrial use. Today, the same design has been adapted to smaller models to meet the material handling needs of most applications. All of these models handle a wide range of materials, from tough pen pack and sticky feed lot material to slurry types of manure, as well as difficult industrial materials

Front Drive Compartment*

Simple Massive Reduction Drive

Each of the ProTwin models is designed for maximum, high torque output The fully sealed front oil bath enclosures help assure that chains and sprockets remain clean and well lubricated The auger and expeller shafts are sealed to help eliminate oil contamination. Polyethylene-type spring loaded chain tighteners are used on all driveline chains for positive alignment and long life. Bearings can easily be greased through the external grease banks without removing the front drive shield. Splined shafts have been used in all high-torque areas to provide added strength and reliability.

PTO Driveline

Constant Velocity PTO with Overload Clutch

Both 540 and 1000 RPM drivelines incorporate a constant velocity joint to provide a smooth transfer of power from the tractor to the unit This relieves uneven stress on the drive train during normal turns and during operation over uneven terrain. The overload clutch provides protection for the expeller shaft and initial drive components (There is no shear pin in the expeller drive)

Forged-Steel Hammer

Each hammer has a nylon bushing and a replaceable manganese steel wear plate

Hammer Discharge

Patented Free Swinging Hammer Expeller

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on a 2½" shaft The hammers pivot on ⅜" bolts with nylon anti-seize type bushings that allow free movement The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material, peeling it off and slinging it underhand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps The 3" wide, free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects Each hammer is faced with a work-hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width This proven hammer expeller design enables fine spreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed

Rear Drive Compartment*

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected Bearings, chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance

*Shields removed for illustration only
Do not operate without shields in place and functioning

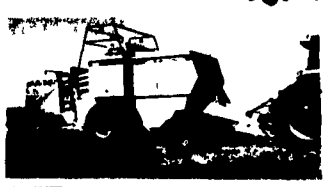
JUMBO BALES

One Ton Size

A Case International 8580 Large Rectangular Baler Makes JUMBO bales -up to 2,000 pounds



It compresses hay equivalent to about 40 conventional bales into a single high-density package. The high-end capacity and performance of the 8580 means you can push these big bales throught the machine all day — every day. That's a lot of hay!
And it's quality hay, too. The center-line design handles the crop gently to preserve nutritious leaves. The bales are uniformly shaped for efficient handling and shipping.
The 8580 also has a full list of standard features. Low-profile pickup, pre-packer chamber, massive gearbox, heavy-duty components throughout, electronic monitoring, double-tie knotters and low maintenance. And it's simple to operate.
The Case International 8580 is a JUMBO value too.

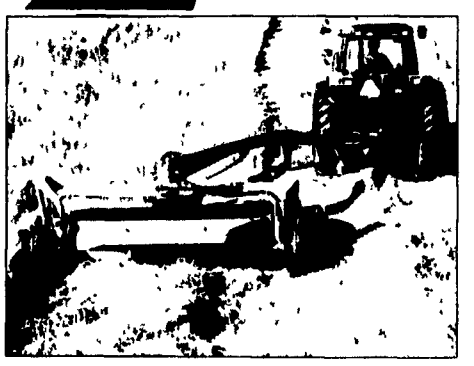
Proven & Tested To Customer Satisfaction.



The Case International 8312 disc mower conditioner just keeps on cutting – no matter what it encounters Tangled undergrowth, rodent mounds ant hills or heavy hay are no match for the heat-treated, high-speed rotary discs at the heart of the 8312

A center pivot tongue lets you cut a full 12-foot swath in either direction and maneuver around obstacles Lay down a quick-drying swath or fluffy windrow and, depending on your crop conditioning rolls can be quickly adjusted for optimum drying

If continuous cutting with a center pivot machine is important to you stop in and see the Case International 8312

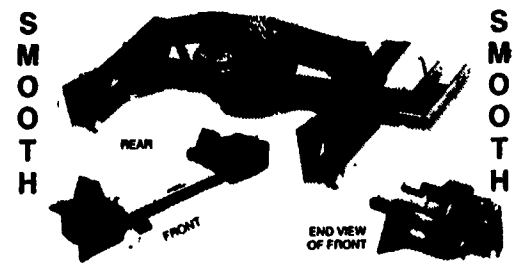
KELDERMAN AIR RIDE



Adding a Kelderman Air Ride Conversion system to your present suspension will result in a two stage suspension system. This is not to be confused with adding an Air bag mounted above the axle. Allows adding extra spring leafs to increase load rating and still maintain Air-Ride comfort.
The bolt on plastic package utilizes an air stem mounted in a convenient location to add or remove air from the system.
Optional 12 volt compressor allows changing air pressure setting on the go.
Currently available from front and rear suspension in Dodge Series 250 & 350 trucks. Available soon for Dodge Dakota models.
Also available for some Ford, Chevy and GMC truck models. Special orders available for most motor homes. This option will smooth out the ride on those rough-road fishing/camping trips.

SPACE, TIME AND MONEY

CASE IH

That's what you can expect to save with a Case International 8570 rectangular baler. The 8570 makes bales that save space by compressing the same amount of hay as approximately 20 conventional bales into a 1,000 pound, mid-size package.

ALL THE AMENITIES

The Case International 5300 Grain Drill makes sense.

The versatility of the 5300 allows you to tailor the machine to your precise needs. There are a variety of widths and row spacings; plain hopper or combination seed/fertilizer hopper; four opener options; large capacity hoppers; and the Soybean Special.

Few tractors can contribute more to your bottom line than a John Deere 5000 Series. That's because these 40-, 50-, and 60-PTO hp tractors have traditional John Deere reliability and operating ease. And prices to challenge well-known domestics and imports. Plus, a long list of standard features like wet-disk brakes, 9-speed collar-shift transmission, planetary final drives, and power steering. Test drive one soon.

The NEW LEADER L3020

Heavy Duty LIME SPREADER

For more than 50 years, New Leader has aggressively met and exceeded market demand by producing the most dependable, adaptable and durable spreaders in the industry. The heavy-duty L-3020 spreader is a direct result of New Leader's unmatched experience in the agricultural equipment field.

Designed for high-volume applications of ag-lime and gypsum, the rugged and resilient L-3020 is also suitable for spreading fertilizer and hauling aggregate material. Equipped with an optional swinging rear endgate, the L-3020 can be quickly and efficiently converted into a controlled discharge, no-hoist dump system for stockpiling. The L-3020's standard 30-inch-wide conveyor system virtually eliminates the material bridging that's common with narrower conveyor spreaders. The versatile L-3020 broadcasts ag-lime at rates up to six tons per acre and fertilizer at rates as low as 150 pounds per acre.

Other Available Features:

- Complete body in 304 or 409 stainless steel
- Mounts on vehicles equipped with highway, semi or full flotation tires
- An optional ladder that attaches to either the left-or right-hand-side of the unit
- Optional heat-and petroleum - resistant conveyor belting available for transport and application of hot asphalt.

Five Sure-Fire Ways to Reduce Milk Production

With all the talk of milk surpluses and low milk prices, it seems that there are some dairy producers who have volunteered to help reduce the supply of milk. Some of the techniques I have seen them use are:

1. Limiting the amount of total mixed ration (TMR) offered to cows. The cows are forced to eat the last milligram of feed in the bunk before more is offered.

2. Limiting access to water. One waterer for 100 cows will limit milk production. Dirty water tanks also is a common way to limit milk production.

3. Ignoring cow comfort. Making cows stand, rathering than having a comfortable place to lie; having no fans in the barn; and having no shade over the feed bunks are all common ways to ignore cow comfort.

4. Raising small first-lactation heifers. Up to one-third of the milking herd is first-lactation animals, and if they calve at a light weight (less than 1200 lbs. after calving) they won't milk up to their potential. Later they can go through a second-lactation (sophomore) slump, which further limits herd milk production.

5. Feeding low energy grain mixes to high producing cows. Cows won't peak to their potential, thus reducing their total lactation milk yield by 220 lbs. for each 1 pound peak milk loss. Body condition also suffers, thereby reducing breeding efficiency and increasing herd days-in-milk.

Luckily, there aren't too many producers willing to volunteer for this type of program!

Attention to details will help AVOID these types of situations, and will allow your herd to maximize efficiency of production, thereby reducing the unit cost of producing a hundred-weight of milk. Ask your Purina Mills representative for information and ideas that will help you achieve maximum efficiency of milk production for your herd.
